UNKNOWN DEAD MAN MAY BE BELLEFONTER

Letter on Body Found in Joliet, Ill., Addressed to David Thomas.

MAILED HERE MAY 5th.

No Other Clew to Identity of Stranger Found Lifeless Along Railroad Tracks—Chief Dukeman Unable to Clear up Mystery.

The lifeless body of a man, supposed to be David Thomas, of near Bellefonte, was found near the tracks of the Rock Island railroad, at Joliet, Illinois, on Wednesday of last week, and is being held by Coroner William C. Wunderlich, until the identity may be positively established and friends of the dead man indicate what disposition shall be made of the remains.

An unsigned letter found on the clothing of the dead man furnishes the police of Joliet the only clue as to his identity. The letter was addressed to David Thomas and was mailed to him from Bellefonte on May 5, last, at 9 o'clock A. M. The letter was received by the man at Minooka, Illinois. Thomas, as the man is supposed to be, was of powerful build and supposedly was an iron worker. His body was covered with tatoo marks. Describing the finding of the man's body and the mystery surrounding his identity and the exact cause of his death, the Joliet "Herald," on June 1, published the following:

"Mystery surrounds the death of an unknown man, whose body was found lying along the Rock Island tracks, one mile west of Rockdale, yesterday afternoon. His skull had been fractured. No other injuries were found and the body was not scratched or bruised.

"Efforts to establish the man's identity have been fruitless. He is about forty years of age and was of powerful build. His hair is sandy. The arms and chest were covered with tatoo marks.

"The crew of a freight train discovered the body and notified the Rock Island switching crew at Rockdale. Foreman Martin Kennedy and his men returned and brought the body to Joliet.

"It is not believed that the man was struck by a train, as it is said by railroad officials that the body would have been scratched and bruised.

"The only theories are that he was walking along the tracks and was struck by an open grain car door or that he met with foul play.

"The body is held at Wunderlich's morgue pending an investigation."

Coroner Wunderlich, of Joliet, on Tuesday wrote to Chief of Police Dukeman, of Bellefonte, telling of the finding of the body and asking that the man's relatives or friends be looked up and apprised of his death. Coroner Wunderlich furnished the following description of the body:

Age, about 45 years.
Height 5 feet, 10 inches.
Weight, about 180 pounds.
Eyes, blue.
Hair, brown.
Clean shaven.

The tatoo marks on the man's body are described as follows:

On chest, two sun designs, with lady standing on either side with outstretched arms. Snake, lady with sword and also a crown and bracelet on left arm. On right arm lady, heart monogram, lady standing on a ball, also figure of goose and man.

Chief of Police Dukeman made a search of the records at the Court House but was unable to learn anything to indicate that the dead man had ever been a resident of Bellefonte or surrounding county.

Young Man Missing.

It is possible that some resident of this county will earn the liberal reward offered on page 4, of this paper for information regarding the whereabouts of R. G. Harris, a young man who wandered away from the Sheppard—Pratt Hospital about four weeks ago. He was last seen in this vicinity.

His full description is given in the advertisement. Attention is called to the fact that Harris is absolutely harmless, and anyone approaching him need have no fear of personal injury.

Mackeyville Resident Stricken.

John Solt, a resident of Mackeyville for many years and well known as a successful farmer, suffered a stroke of paralysis on Saturday morning. He was sitting on his front porch, waiting to be summoned to breakfast, when stricken. His one side was affected and his speech impaired. Mr. Solt is past 80 years of age.

COMMENCEMENT AT STATE

Several Unique Features Will Mark Graduation Exercises.

There will be several unique features at the commencement exercises at State College, which begin tomorrow and continue over Wednesday of next week.

For the first time since coming to the United States, the Chinese Minister will speak upon the Chinese question, his topic being "America's Part in the Rejuvenation of China." The Minister will be accompanied by Madame Chang, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Chang, Miss Lili and Alice Chang, with secretaries and an interpreter. The Baccalaureate sermon will be given by Dean Herbert Lockwood Willett, of the University of Chicago.

Another feature will be the fiftieth reunion of the first graduating class—the Class of '61. Seven members of the twelve survive and will be present. They are: Hon. John N. Banks, Indiana, Pa.; A. C. Church, Luzerne, Pa.; John W. Eckman, Pulaski, Va.; Milton S. Lyttle, Philadelphia; E. P. McCormick, Germantown, Philadelphia; C. Alfred Smith, Chicago, Illinois, Colonel Charles E. Troutman, National Soldiers' Home, Tenn.

Dr. T. R. Baker, of Rawlins College, Florida, who was a member of State Faculty in 1861, will be an honored guest. A bachelor degree will be conferred upon J. H. Isett, of Isett, Pa., who left college in 1861 to join General Sherman's Body-guard two months before his graduation. A degree will be conferred upon Judge George B. Orlady, at one time a student of the college, as of the Class of 1868.

The atheletic events include a track meet with Colgate University, baseball games with the University of Virginia and Bucknell, and a game of soccor football. The Pharsonians and the Thespians will give performances and "The College Widow" will be presented as an outdoor entertainment for the benefit of the Christian Association.

The graduating class will number about 233, of whom seven are young women in the Home Economic course. Last year's class numbered 168. The class Valedictorian is Willard Raymond Rhoads, of Roaring Creek, Pa. The John W. White Fellowship, the highest honor of the graduating class, has been won by W. D. Meikle, of Galeton, Pa. He will spend the coming year in the University of Geneva. The White Medal for second honors was won by R. M. Briner, of Reading, Pa.

The week's program will be officially started tomorrow at 10 o'clock with a review of the Cadet Regiment, under the direct command of Nicolas de Urcullu, Military Attache of the Royal Spanish Legation, of Washington, D. C.

DEATH AT PORT MATILDA

Mrs. George R. Williams, Well Known Resident, Passes Away.

Mrs. George R. Williams, a well known resident of Port Matilda, died at her late home at that place early Monday morning, last. Deceased was aged about 60 years and was a life-long member of the Methodist Episcopal church. By her many splendid qualities and high ideals, Mrs. Williams surrounded herself with a circle of warm and admiring friends and by all her death is sincerely mourned.

Prior to her marriage she was Miss Fannie Harpster, a daughter of John and Leah Harpster. Surviving are a husband and the following children: Aaron D. and Walter H. Williams and Mrs. John Crain and Mrs. Lafayette Ross, of Port Matilda, and Rev. Gordon Williams, pastor of the Fairview Methodist Episcopal church, at Altoona. Two sisters and two brothers also survive: Mrs. Jacob Woodring and Mrs. Aaron Woodring and Joseph Harpster, of Port Matilda, and William Harpster, of Houtzdale.

Funeral services were held at Port Matilda yesterday at 10 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Mr. Gilbert, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, assisted by Rev. H. A. McKelvey, pastor of the United Brethren church. Interment was made at Port Matilda.

When Black is Red.

County Commissioner John L. Dunlap, John M. Fisher, William Hamilton, Recorder William H. Brown, J. Homer Decker and several others were discussing a big street poster a few night ago. The conversation drifted to the question of colors and which was the most conspicuous on posters, such as are used to advertise picnics, sales, etc. Several were strongly of the belief that red was the most striking color. Commissioner Dunlap did more listening than talking. Finally he drawled out:

"If the letters are big enough they can be as black as your hat and still be re(a)d."

MISS POTTER WEDS 'MID PROFUSION OF FLOWERS

Becomes Bride of Hugh Laird Curtin on Wednesday Evening.

MR. HEWITT OFFICIATES

Ceremony Performed by Rector of St. John's P. E. Church—Witnessed by Families of Young Couple and Few Intimate Friends.

The wedding of Miss Thomazine Harris Potter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Harris Potter, and Mr. Hugh Laird Curtin, son of Mrs. Henry Roland Curtin, was solemnized at half past six o'clock Wednesday evening, June 7th, at the home of the bride's parents, on Linn Street.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. John Hewitt. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Janet Harris Potter, as maid of honor, and by Miss Katharine Curtin, sister of the groom, as bridesmaid. Mr. James C. Furst was the groom's best man.

The bride's gown was a white satin crepe de chine, trimmed in point applique lace and seed pearls. She wore the gift of the groom, a diamond and pearl horse shoe pin, and carried a boquet of swainsonia.

The maid of honor and bridesmaid wore gowns of pale marguesette, trimmed in forget-me-nots and white sweet-peas.

The decorations were American Beauty roses, carnations and magnolia blossoms.

Mrs. Potter's gown was a smoke colored marguesette, and Mrs. Curtin wore black chiffon.

At the bride's table, in addition to the bridal party, were Miss Edna Sloane, of Pittsburg; Miss Margaret Thomas and Miss Elizabeth Gephart, of Bellefonte; Mr. Charles F. Clement, of Sunbury; Mr. Randolph Hoy, of Pittsburg, and Thomas Beaver and Harry Curtin.

The out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. James L. Sommerville, Miss Sommerville and Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Sommerville, of Winburne, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. B. V. Sommerville and Miss Ellen Sommerville, of Crafton, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Sommerville, of Jersey Shore, Pa.; Mrs. George L. Potter, of Baltimore, Md.; Miss Thomazine T. Potter, of Elkins Park, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Chancey O'Neil, of Sewickley, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. G. Henry Stetson, of Elkins Park, Pa.; Mr. Charles F. Clement, Sunbury, Pa.; Miss Edna Sloane, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Curtin and Randolph Hoy, of Pittsburg, and Mr. J. Harris Hoy and Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Snyder, of Snow Shoe.

Centre Countians to Picnic.

The eighth annual basket picnic of the Centre County Association of Philadelphia will be held on Saturday afternoon, June 24, at 2 o'clock, at Belmont Mansion, in Fairmount Park. A cordial invitation to all Centre Countians, whether in Philadelphia or elsewhere, to attend is extended by the association. These annual reunions at Fairmount Park are delightful functions and afford Centre Countians an opportunity to and enjoy a day in the woods. The officers of the association are Dr. Roland G. Curtin, president; Ira D. Garman, vice president; S. Gray Mattern treasurer, and Dr. J. C. C. Beale, secretary. If you happen to be in Philadelphia don't forget to attend the picnic. Keep in mind the fact that the date is the last Saturday afternoon in June.

Signs Hunting Bill.

Governor Tener has signed the bill making the raccoon a game animal to be hunted in September, October, November and December, and fixing the season for rabbits, gray, black or fox squirrels, ruffled grouse, wilds turkey, quail and pheasants from November 1 to December 15. The governor also signed the bill requiring that the pedigree of all stallions and jacks be filed with the State Livestock Sanitary Board, at Harrisburg. Another bill signed by the Governor requires directors of banks, trust companies and financial institutions to take oaths of office.

Hecla Park Dances.

The Friday afternoon and evening concerts and dances at Hecla Park will be resumed for the season, on Friday, June 9th. Christy Smith's Orchestra has again been engaged for the summer of 1911. Hecla with its beautiful grounds, and other features that go to make an ideal play ground, never was more attractive than this year.

Trains leave Bellefonte for the Park at 2.20 and 6.55 P. M. and returning leave the Park for Bellefonte at 4.41 and 9.15 P. M.

TRAVELS FROM FAR WEST WEDS CENTRE COUNTIAN

Miss Larson, of Minn. Married to W. N. Ilgen, of Centre Hall.

A COURTSHIP BY MAIL

Young Couple First Meet in Florida—Love at First Sight Leads to Wedding Plans by Exchange of Letters—Will Reside on Farm.

Meeting her future husband for the first time while on a visit to Tampa, Florida, which resulted in a case of love at first sight, and conducting the courtship by correspondence, Miss Lena Larson came all the way from Duluth, Minnesota, on Monday and on Tuesday afternoon was married to Wallace N. Ilgen, of Centre Hall. The wedding ceremony, which marked the climax to the pretty romance, was performed by Rev. Dr. A. M. Schmidt, pastor of the Bellefonte St. John's Reformed church.

Mr. Ilgen, who is 33 years of age, is a successful young farmer, occupying what is best known as the old Lieb farm, near Centre Hall. His bride who is about the same age, is a tall, fine looking, well educated lady. With implicit confidence in her judgment, once Cupid had paved the way, she courageously traveled alone from her far western home to meet the man to whom she had plighted her troth. Arriving in Bellefonte she went to the Garman House, where she remained over night. Mr. Ilgen was here to meet her. On Tuesday he secured the necessary marriage license and with Miss Larson went to the home of Dr. Schmidt, where the nuptial ceremony was performed.

It was while on a visit to Tampa that Mr. Ilgen met the woman who was destined to become his wife. Miss Larson happened to be there at the same time. They saw considerable of each other. Love at first sight seemed to be the result of the meeting. When Miss Larson returned to her home in Minnesota it was with a promise to some day return and become the bride of the Centre County man. This week was fixed for her arrival here and, true to her promise, on Monday she appeared.

Mr. and Mrs. Ilgen, immediately after the wedding ceremony, departed for the farm, near Centre Hall. Mrs. Ilgen is experienced in life on the farm. To Deputy Prothonotary David R. Foreman, who is a friend of her husband and who jokingly asked her whether she could milk the cows, Mrs. Ilgen laughingly replied:

"Yes, but don't tell my husband."

Mr. Foreman promised that he wouldn't.

What for and Who for?

Just suppose that the name of the young man, about whom this article is written, is Samuel, known to all his chums as Sammy. This isn't his name, but it will do in telling the story. The young man is a Bellefonte product and a typical example of a real boy. For some time past he has been away at school. Like most real boys who are away at school he experiences times when his pocketbook is empty. Real boys find lots of things to spend their loose change on at school, and this boy is no exception to the rule. A few days ago he encountered one of those "hard up" periods. He wrote home for money. None was sent. He telegraphed for it. This is what he wired:

"Wire $5. (Signed) Sammy."

"What for?," wired back the careful parent, who almost blew up when received another telegram and upon opening it read:

"For Sammy."

Hospital Notes.

Operations—Mrs. Emma Kline, Miss Rebecca Boggs, Milesburg.

Admitted for treatment—Philip Yawman, Bellefonte.

Discharged—Curtin Dunklebarger, Mrs. Jennie Miller, Bellefonte; Miss Jennie Rippey, Pittsburg.

Miss Frances Swope, nurse, on sick list.

Miss Vida Wetzel, nurse, on vacation.

21 patients in the hospital.

Wedded at Mill Hall.

A pretty wedding was solemnized in the Mill Hall Methodist Episcopal church, on Thursday evening of last week, the contracting parties being Miss Jennie C. Bennett, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Bennett, and John Powers, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Powers. The groom is in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, at Johnstown, where he has established a home for his bride.

RED LETTER DAY

Commander Richard E. Holz to Address Local Salvation Army.

Tomorrow evening, Friday, June 9, will witness an interesting event in Salvation Army circles in Bellefonte. A grand rally will be held in the Y. M. C. A. hall, to be addressed by Colonel Richard E. Holz, Commander of the Atlantic Coast Province in Salvation Army work in the United States. He will be assisted by Staff Captain and Mrs. W. C. Crawford. An additional feature will be violin and vocal solos and duets by the Missess Kathleen Holz and Ethel Bridgen, of Philadelphia. All are cordially invited.

Colonel Holz was born in Germany and was there educated for the German Civil Service.

While engaged in business in the city of Buffalo he first met The Salvation Army, and intuitively perceiving the earnestness and practicability of the workers, he offered himself, and in 1884 he became a Commissioned Officer.

During the twenty-seven years active service he has risen step by step from the ranks, until today he is one of the leading officers of the Army; during this time he has filled varied and important positions.

In July, 1908, the Colonel was appointed Commander of The Atlantic Coast Province, with Headquarters at Philadelphia, and superintending the Army's work in ten States, reaching from New Jersey down the coast to Florida and Louisiana.

Before coming to Philadelphia, Colonel Holz for 9 years commanded the Army's operations in Ohio and the South, during which time the work developed very rapidly. A splendid five-story fireproof building was erected in Cleveland, Ohio, at a cost of over $100,000, during the Colonel's administration; in addition, he acquired other properties, valued at over half a million dollars.

The Colonel has a family of five children, the two eldest daughters being actively engaged as officers in the Army, while Mrs. Holz is an able helpmate and takes an active part in the work.

Teachers' Examination.

County Superintendent of Schools Etters yesterday conducted an examination of applicants for teachers' provisional certificates. The examination was conducted at the new Bellefonte High School building. Those appearing for examination were the following:

Homer H. Zeigler, Roy Uhl, George B. Wise, Lee Zong, Fred Lose, John Herman, Roy A. Coldren, Harry L. Noll, Leslie E. Miller, Madeline Noll, Elsie Herman, Marian Gettig, Helen Brooks, all of Pleasant Gap. Clarence Crust, William F. Shope, Beulah Woods, Catherine Hoy, Clare Reynolds, Bertha Deitrick, Vianna Grove, Elsie Altenderffer, Helen Eberhart, Chester Barnes, LeRoy Hogarth, all of Bellefonte. Martha H. Kerin, Moshannon. Ophelia Haupt, Milesburg. Anna Dawson, Axe Mann. Grace Showalter, Zion.

Verdict in Odd Case.

In her suit against Court Pride, of Paulsboro, Foresters of America, Mrs. Ellen Ahern, of Gloucester, widow of Henry Ahern, was given a verdict of $100 in the Circuit Court, in Camden, on Monday. At the time of his death Ahern should not have been over 50 years old to entitle his widow to benefits, and when a member of the order attended the funeral and saw that the coffin plate gave the age as 52, he reported the fact, and the lodge refused to pay the death benefit.

It was explained by Undertaker Blake in Court that the family could not tell the exact age of the man, but guessed it was 52, and he put that age on the plate. The burden of the proof was placed on the lodge to show that Ahern was not 47 years old when he joined the order, as he declared, but older.

Death of A. L. Peters.

Philipsburg is mourning the death of Abraham Lewis Peters, one of the best known and most highly respected business men of that place, who passed away on Monday evening, last. Deceased was born in Orient, Maine, June 9, 1849 and when quite young located at Clearfield, later removing to Keywayden and from there, to Philipsburg. Mr. Peters was married at Lock Haven, April 26, 1876, to Mary H. Kunes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Kunes, of Keywayden. Surviving are a widow and two sons and three daughters.

Rebuilding at Waddle.

The progressive firm of Huyett & McNitt, whose saw, lathe and stave mills were burned at Waddle last week, are losing no time in rebuilding their plant. Work is already under way and will be rushed through to completion.

BLUNDER SAVED CLEMSON CHILD FROM KIDNAPPERS

Little Son of Family Chauffeur Stolen and then Abandoned.

HOPED FOR BIG RANSOM

Child Which was to Have Been Kidnapped is Grandson of D. M. Clemson, of Pittsburg, and Frank H. Clemson, of Stormstown.

Owing to a blunder whereby the kidnappers secured the wrong child, a conspiracy to carry off little Richard Clemson, the 3-years-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Clemson, of Pittsburg, and a grandson of Frank H. Clemson, of near Stormstown, was luckily foiled. The attempted kidnapping was on Monday, last, just on the eve of the departure of the Clemson family for their summer outing along the lakes in Canada. Instead of securing the Clemson child the kidnappers got possession of a child of about the same age, the little son of Mr. Clemson's chauffeur. When they discovered the blunder the kidnappers abandoned the child of Mr. Clemson's chauffeur. It was the mysterious disappearance and later the discovery of the chauffeur's child that revealed to the police the conspiracy to hold the Clemson boy for a heavy ransom. The police at once placed a guard over the Clemson child.

Ralph Clemson is the son of Daniel M. Clemson, of Pittsburg. The two families reside a short distance from each other. The kidnappers, hoping to secure a heavy ransom from D. M. Clemson, who is very wealthy, set their plans for stealing his grandchild. They had seen the child in the Clemson automobile on numerous occasions. They overlooked the fact, however, that the Clemson chauffeur had a child of about the same age. Picking out what they believed to be an opportune time for their work the kidnappers lured away the child which they believed to be little Richard Clemson. It was not until they had got away with the child that they discovered their mistake. They then quickly abandoned the stolen child and made their escape. Thus far the Pittsburg police have not been able to obtain any clew as to the identity of the kidnappers.

Award Bridge Contracts.

County Commissioners Woodring, Zimmerman and Dunlap on Friday of last week awarded contracts to the Ferro Concrete Company, of Harrisburg, for the building of a new bridge in Halfmoon township, and one in Marion township. The contract for the Halfmoon township bridge called for $995, or approximately one-half the figure bid by several others. The price specified was so low, as compared with others, as to occasion considerable comment and speculation. It was said that the company was enabled to make a low bid owing to the fact that it has contracts for other concrete work in the same township. Most of the bids for the Marion township bridge varied but slightly. The several bids submitted were as follows:

	Half-Moon Twp.	Marion Twp.
Ferro Concrete Co, Harrisburg	$ 995.00	$1435.00
Rhoads & Knisely, Bellefonte	1724.65	1904.00
Nelson Meredith, Chambersburg	1292.00	2839.00
A Buchanan, Chambersburg	1008.00	1588.00
York Bridge Co., York	1740.00	1975.00
Boyer, Peterson & Morris, Phila		1783.98

Miss Irma Smith Weds.

At the home of the bride's mother, on East High Street, Bellefonte, at 8 o'clock Wednesday morning, George W. VanNortwick, of Waverly, N. Y., and Miss Irma H. Smith, daughter of the late G. W. Smith, were joined in holy wedlock by the Rev. Dr. Ambrose M. Schmidt. On account of the late death of the bride's father, the wedding was a very quiet home affair.

A. C. Hopkins Stricken.

Former Congressman A. C. Hopkins, of Lock Haven was stricken with apoplexy at his home at that place on Monday morning, last. Dr. Horace Spiller, of Philadelphia, a nerve specialist, was in consultation on Tuesday with Dr. F. P. Ball, of Lock Haven, in regard to Mr. Hopkins' condition, which was pronounced to be grave but not necessarily hopeless.

Woodmen Decorate.

The Modern Woodmen, of this place, decorated the grave of one of its members, John Harrison, last Sunday in the Union cemetary. They also decorated the grave of Myron Smith, of Altoona.

FOES OF PEACH TREES

Interesting Bulletin on How to Deal With These Destructive Pests.

The peach crop is an important one to New Jersey, Deleware and Maryland, the industry ranking for a score of years as an important industry. It is also of great importance in parts of Pennsylvania, says the Phila. Record. The San Jose scale pest gave peach growing the first serious knockout, cleaning out orchard after orchard. This called for more careful work and watching. The old haphazard methods that did well enough 30 years ago had to be supplanted with scientific care, and the State Experimental Station prepared itself with latest information, made experiments and finally worked a lot of good. The nurseries were kept under even closer supervision, new orchards were started in all sections of the State in a tentative way, and clean stock became the rule rather than the exception.

With the ever-increasing experience in the use of insecticides and fungicides, control of the San Jose scale became a matter of routine, with results that could be absolutely counted on whenever the work was done in the proper manner. The result has been that peach growing in New Jersey is increasing and flourishing on a firmer basis than ever.

Besides the scale, however, there are other enemies, viz., the peach borer, which is especially injurious in the southern section of the State, due to a lighter soil; the plum curculio, which affects the value of the fruit; the Serapin scale (at present almost solely confined to Cumberland county, in injurious form) the black peach louse, which does injury only in the lighter soils, and principally during the early life of the tree; the green peach louse, which only becomes seasonally and locally troublesome on younger trees; the fruit bark beetle, which is not confined to the peach, but will attack almost any weakened fruit tree—on a healthy, vigorous tree it produces no effect whatever; the twig borer of peach, which in some seasons and localities does noticeable injury and may stunt young trees to some extent; the rose bug, which in times of plenty sometimes eats into the fruit in June and destroys it for market purposes.

The New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station, New Brunswick, N. J., in Bulletin No. 235, takes up the subject of insects injurious to the peach trees in New Jersey, and gives the best by test remedies. Considerable space is given to the peach tree borer, in which we learn that there is no insecticide application thus far known that can be relied upon to kill borers once in the trees. Not only do they ordinarily feed beneath the bark, except just after they are hatched, but they are further protected by the mass of exuding gum which forms over the wound. Sometimes a borer does not really go beneath the bark at all, but forms a surface cavity, in which it lies, covering or natural protection so as to kill the larva, without danger of injuring the tree. Hot weather comes nearest to doing this, and where a few trees only are to be protected, occasional applications of water at a temperature of not over 175 degrees will serve to keep the trees free, if the protecting exudations of gum are first removed.

An existing or already infested orchard should be carefully examined at least twice in each year; as late as convenient in fall, and again in the following end of May or early June. In the fall examination the earth should be removed from around the base of the trees to a depth of at least six and preferably eight inches, and every sign of a wound or place from which gum exudes should be investigated. There is needed a small, stiff, coarse brush to remove the gum and crush all surface feeding larvae; a stout sharp knife to cut through the bark into cavities, and a more slender, longer blade to probe channels and burrows. Never cut more than necessary and never cut across the grain if it can be avoided. If a larvae can be located, a straight slit through the bark into the cavity so as to hit the borer is all that is needed and such a wound will heal almost at once Where chips are mingled with exuding gum, a borer is almost always present; but even where no chips are seen, a small larva may be at work. The examination made at this time should reveal and result in the destruction of all the larvae beyond the third stage, and will leave only those that are less than half grown and so would not be ready to transform until the following July at least. Leave the base of the trunks exposed no longer than necessary at this period, and in drawing up the soil against the trunk wound slightly to serve as winter protection and to bring the clean soil into direct contact with the cut or wounded surface. Nothing will be gained by making any applications of any kind to the trunk at this period.

Between the end of May and the middle of June the process above described should be repeated. By that time the borers that wintered in the second or third stage will have reached the fourth stage at least, and will show signs of their presence, even if pretty well down. Their feeding will not have been sufficient to have caused serious harm, and careful work at this time should result in the elimination of at least 95 per cent. of all the borers present in the orchard. Leave the base of the trees exposed for a few days now, to toughen the outer bark, and then, before again drawing up the soil, spray very thoroughly with a lime-sulphur, arsenate of lead mixture, to which an excess of lime has been added. Use one pound paste arsenate of lead to every five gallons of lime-sulphur, or one pound of dry arsenate to every ten gallons of lime-sulphur, and apply with all the force possible to the exposed crown and for a distance of eighteen to twenty-four inches above the surface. Then cover and hill up at least six inches around the trunk after the application is thoroughly dry. The strength of the lime-sulphur wash may be that of the ordinary winter spray with double the required amount of lime.

This Bulletin is of untold value to peach growers, showing how the enemies can be captured and destroyed. It will be sent free upon application to the New Jersey station, as above.

Over Century Old; Still Vigorous

Readers of "The Republican" will be interested in the announcement of the approach of the one hundred and twenty-fifth birthday anniversary of The Pittsburg Gazette Times. Founded as The Gazette by John Scull, July 29, 1786, the paper has been continuously published for a century and a quarter, and next to the Block House is the oldest work of man in Pittsburg today.

The Gazette Times is planning a birthday celebration that will be unique in the history of journalism. During the week of July 24-29 it will issue six historical souvenir numbers that should be bought and preserved by every reader of "The Republican". These special issues will review the world's progress of the past 125 years, all of which took place under the eye of the paper and was recorded in it.

Each day's issue will be devoted to special subjects, the arrangement being as follows: July 24, Building Construction, July 25, Transportation and Empire Building; July 26, Iron, Steel, Glass, Banking and Business; July 27, Foods and Food Products; July 28, Clothing and Merchandising; July 29, Electricity, Comforts, Music and Education. The history of The Gazette Times will also be printed on this date.

Writers specially fitted to prepare articles on the various topics have been engaged and everything will be historically and chronologically correct. There is no doubt but that the birthday celebration of The Pittsburg Gazette Times will be the biggest achievement in newspaper circles ever recorded and no one should miss securing all the special issues.

Robert Campbell Married.

The Tyrone Herald publishes the following account of the wedding of Robert Campbell, of the Penn's Cave hotel, and Miss Edith Picken, formerly of Tyrone but more recently residing at Williamsport:

On Thursday evening at six o'clock Miss Edith Picken, the accomplished daughter of Rev. and Mrs. W. R. Picken, of Williamsport, became the wife of Robert Campbell, of Penn's Cave, Centre County. The bride was a former Tyrone lady and resided on Columbia Avenue with her parents while her father was pastor of Columbia Avenue Methodist church. She is a most excellent young lady and during her stay in Tyrone made hosts of friends who join with the Herald in wishing her a life full of joy and happiness. The groom is proprietor of the Penn's Cave hotel and general manager of the famous Penn's Cave, the natural wonder of the age. He is a splendid young man every way and is held in high esteem by a large circle of friends. He is a brother of John B. Campbell and Mrs. Howard Musser of Tyrone. After a wedding tour to eastern cities Mr. and Mrs. Campbell will be at home at Penn's Cave, Centre County. Among the folks who attended the wedding from Tyrone were Mr. and Mrs. John B. Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. J. Howard Musser, Miss Alice Rose Williams, Miss Sara Smith, Miss Lila Shellenberger and Miss Olive Wertz.

The Real Sufferer.

The "Prodigal Son" was the subject of the Sunday-school lesson, and the teacher was dwelling on the character of the elder brother.

"But amidst all the rejoicing," said the teacher, "there was one to whom the preparation of the feast brought no joy, to whom the prodigal's return gave no happiness, only bitterness; one who did not approve of the feast and had no wish to attend it. Now, who can tell me who this was?"

Silence for several moments; then a hand raised and a small, sympathetic voice:

"Please, ma'am, it was the fatted calf."—Metropolitan Magazine.

A BIT OF HISTORY

Interesting Narrative of Early Life in Half-Moon Valley.

It was in 1784 that the first white settler found his way to Half Moon Valley. He was Abraham Elder, who came from Franklin county, locating on the home now owned by Capt. A. J. Hunter to the east of Stormstown. He found an abandoned cabin there, and turnips and wheat were his first crop. This planting done, he returned to Franklin county, and the following spring his wife and infant son (Robert) traveled on horseback to their new home. A stone mansion was erected on the site of the cabin in 1808, and in 1832 an addition was erected by Robert Elder, which mansion today is the home of Captain Hunter, whose wife was a granddaughter of Abraham Elder.

This structure was the first hotel west of Bellefonte to accommodate the many travelers west to Pittsburg. The main article of transportation was iron ore and later iron. Here (in the cabin) was held the first religious meeting in Half Moon Valley, the Elders being Presbyterians.

The first Quaker to settle in that valley was George Wilson, a native of Chester county, who located in that vicinity in 1792 Many of the descendants live there now, and worship in the church of their fathers. Other Quakers to follow closely were Benjamin and Caleb Way, brothers. Edward B. Way, who lives on one of the best equipped farms in that neighborhood, being one of the descendants of one of the branches of this family. Between 1804 and 1820 many others, the majority of them Quakers, located in this valley.

The structure occupied by Half Moon Grange was erected in 1830 by the Quakers, and was the second Meeting House, the first having been erected in 1800 at the cemetery, about one mile to the west. This latter was a log structure, and prominent among the promoters of this church enterprise were George Wilson, the Ways, Moores, Spencers and Downings.

During 1841 a more imposing church edifice was built. This structure stands today and is the worshipping place of the Friends of the fourth, fifth and sixth generations. About this time a distribution of funds was made by the main body of Friends in Chester county, and this fund was used in establishing a school in the old church (now Grange Hall). A Friends' school was maintained with more or less irregularity since the erection of the log cabin meeting house, in which house the first school in Half Moon Valley was taught. The Quaker took with him his church and his school.

Half Moon Valley was so named from the half-moons cut on the trees by the Indians along their trails between Standing Stone (Huntingdon) and Bald Eagle's Nest (Milesburg). Warriors Mark also got its name from the marks cut on trees by "warriors."

Stormstown got its name from Jacob Storm, who founded it. He came there in 1800, and believed that inasmuch as there was already a tavern, a store, a smithy conducted by Edward Webb, and a superior class of people in the neighborhood, it would be a good point to lay out a town and did so. Later additional lots were laid out, and this plot was named Walkerville. Stormstown, up to 1880, was called Half Moon in the postal service.

As early as 1810, Abraham Elder closed his place to travelers, and at this time Benjamin Way opened a public house, which up to 1860 was licensed, but since has been conducted as a boarding house.

In 1867 a fire broke out in the village town, and in a short while twenty-six buildings were destroyed and sixteen families were homeless. Every business place was burned, including the post office. It was a serious calamity from which the village never fully recovered.

Half Moon Grange, No 290, was organized June 19, 1874, by Hon. Leonard Rhone. But three charter members survive, the trio being Capt. A. J. Hunter, Master; Isaiah Beck, Overseer, and Isaac Beck, Treasurer.—Centre Reporter.

Man's Love for Soil.

The sweet smell of the products of the soil is balm in the soul of even the man who has baked out his life on city pavements, never seeing a blossoming orchard nor stealing green apples from venerable branches—for lack of the chance. Old Adam gave the race that heritage of loving a taste of nature. Down through the millions of generations it will go, an imperishable treasure. —New York Press.

POWDER MILL VISITORS

Rules Enforced on Their Sightseeing Have Little of Hospitality.

The men who work in powder plants are a study in themselves. Probably in no other business do the human agents take more precautions against disaster with such pitiful results.

Men who work in powder plants are in constant fear of death. They are face to face with peril every second. Instead of growing hardened to it, as do the laborers in many other fields of danger, they appear to be the most superstitious class of men on earth. They are well paid. A man who has nerve enough to work at this trade is worthy of his hire. He can command $10 a day, sometimes $20. He practically makes his own rules—since he is the one to suffer from an infraction of them. His every suspicion is respected by his employer. He cannot dictate the hours of labor, since that is a matter eternally in dispute, as in other kinds of labor, but he can dictate the conditions under which he works, from the moment he enters the factory until he leaves.

These superstitions seem absurd, sometimes, but they are the law of the gunpowder factory. If you are an employer, you break the law at the risk of financial loss; if you are a fellow employe, you violate it at the risk of your life.

One of the first laws among the employes is that of self-preservation. They have a deep-rooted fear of the casual visitor. Few men have gone through a gunpowder plant out of mere curiosity. They are not wanted, and are told so frankly. If they succeed in obtaining the permission of the superintendent, or possibly of some one higher in authority, they are subjected to an extraordinary ordeal before they are admitted to the sacred precincts.

First they are searched—and no police official is more adept in the art of "frisking" than is the outer guardian of the average gunpowder plant. Every piece of metal, from pocket knife to garter clasp—every coin, match, suspender buckle, everything that could possibly strike a spark, is removed. The hatband of the most fashionable derby is examined with care, to see that it carried no metal initials. And this examination is not carried on alone by the official whose favor you have gained. A representative of the employes takes an active part in the examination, and if he has any doubts he will politely request you to strip to the skin.

Once inside the powder factory you are under even more careful scrutiny. Your shoes are taken away, and you are provided with felt slippers. Convinced that on your person there is no piece of metal which under any provocation could strike a spark, you may feel at liberty to roam around, but you are not. Your every move is watched carefully, and should you make a gesture calculated to imspire distrust you would be hustled out of the building and told to leave the neighborhood within a given time. Mrs. J. F. Thal, 23 W. Thomas St., Bellefonte, Pa., says: "I am very grateful to Doan's Kidney Pills for what they have done for me. My back ached for a long time and I had severe pains in my kidneys, accompained by headaches and attacks of dizziness. The kidney secretions were too frequent in passage and caused me no end of annoyance. When my attention was called to Doan's Kidney Pills I procured a supply at Green's Pharmacy Co. and it did not take them long to give me relief. I cheerfully recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to anyone afflicted with kidney complaint." (Statement given Oct. 21, 1907.)

They Never Fail. When Mrs. Thal was interviewed on Nov. 22, 1909 she said: "I still have unlimited confidence in Doan's Kidney Pills for whenever I have used them in the past two years, they have benefited me. You may continue to publish my former endorsement of this remedy."

HUSTON GOES TO PEN

Fraud Convicted State Capital Architect Begins Sentence.

After a bitter legal fight to keep out of prison, Joseph M. Huston, the architect, who was convicted of conspiracy to defraud the State in the furnishing of the new State capitol, entered the Eastern Penitentiary at Philadelphia at 2.15 o'clock last Thursday afternoon to begin serving his sentence of not less than six months or more than two years.

Huston was taken to the penitentiary by Sheriff Fletcher, of Dauphin county, and a deputy in a taxicab. Upon his arrival in the prison yard Huston remained seated in the vehicle until told to get out. When a prison official approached the sheriff informed him he had one prisoner from Dauphin county. Huston was led into the office, vaccinated, and put through the usual formalities of receiving a prisoner.

Huston took a long horseback ride about Germantown and Chestnut Hill last Thursday morning and came into the city about noon after parting with his family. He was met by the sheriff at the office of his attorneys.

It is likely that Huston will be put to work drafting plans for the proposed new State farm prison.

Liquid Cures Eczema Where Salves Fail.

In regard to skin diseases, medical authorities are now agreed on this:

Don't imprison the disease germs in your skin by the use of greasy salves, and thus encourage them to multiply. A true cure of all eczematous diseases can be brought about only by using the healing agents in the form of a liquid.

WASH THE GERMES OUT.

A simple wash: A compound of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, and other ingredients as combined in the D. D. D. Prescription. This penetrates to the disease germs and destroys them, then soothes and heals the skin as nothing else has ever done.

A 25 cents trial bottle will start the cure and give you instant relief.

Wonderful Praise Accorded Peruna the Household Remedy

Mrs. Maria Goertz, Orienta, Oklahoma, writes:

"My husband, children and myself have used your medicines, and we always keep them in the house in case of necessity. I was restored to health by this medicine, and Dr. Hartman's invaluable advice and books. People ask about me from different places, and are surprised that I can do all of my housework alone, and that I was cured by the doctor of chronic catarrh. My husband was cured of asthma, my daughter of earache and catarrh of the stomach, and my son of catarrh of the throat. When I was sick I weighed 100 pounds; now I weigh 140.

"I have regained my health again, and I cannot thank you enough for your advice. May God give you a long life and bless your work."

My Grandfather's Story

From the Kindness of His Heart He Fell Into a Trap

By EDNA L. TROOP

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

My grandfather, who was a seafaring man almost from the time he was born till he was sixty, told me this story when I was a boy. There were certain incidents and pictures in his narrative that made a lasting impression on my childish mind. I cannot give them as minutely as he who was the central figure of the story nor describe the tropical scenery as he saw it, lighted by a full moon. I can only mention the salient points as I remember them after an interval of many years.

"I was first mate," he said, "of the bark Ann Eliza. We were lying one night in the mouth of St. Johns river, Florida. The crew had gone ashore to a dance at one of the plantations, and the captain had gone in the same boat with them to attend to some business. I was left aboard in command of ten men. The captain had heard that there was a good deal of insubordination among the negro slaves in that region and that bands of negroes had cut loose from their masters and were going about looting whatever of value they could find. He charged me, therefore, to keep a sharp lookout for boats approaching the ship and not permit them to come too near.

"I was sitting on the quarterdeck with a minimum of clothing on me, for the weather was hot, smoking a cigar. The full moon was about an hour high and lit up the palms on the shores and the moss hanging on the forest trees, giving the scenery a peculiarly weird effect. There was not a cloud in the sky and no sound except the waves rolling in on the beach about a mile away, the monotonous rustling being occasionally broken by a song from a negro hut near the river bank.

"I was enjoying the shimmer of the moonlight on the water when I discovered a black speck in it. The water was comparatively smooth, so that I could keep the speck always in view. It soon grew more distinct, and I could distinguish what looked like a couple of paddles, one on each side, flashing alternately in the moonlight. As the spot drew nearer I saw that these were not paddles, but the arms of some one swimming hand over hand, the spot being the swimmer's head.

"Pretty soon the swimmer, a man, approached the ship. I leaned over the taffrail and asked him what he wanted.

"'Please, cap'n,' he said, 'let me come aboard and I'll tell you.'

"I ordered a rope ladder lowered, and the man came up. He was not much above the 'poor white trash' order. He said he owned a small plantation fronting on the river bank just below us, with a few negroes. He had learned that they were that night intending to murder him and all his family and take possession of his plantation. He had come to us for assistance.

"According to the man's story—and he seemed very much affected—unless I sent a force to guard him and his family I would permit their death. If I sent only a part of my men they might also be killed. If I sent them all it would leave the ship unprotected. A man begging for the life of his wife and children is pretty hard to resist. I would be disobeying the captain's orders and putting the ship in jeopardy if I yielded to his solicitations and would permit murder if I refused him.

"I never liked doing things by halves. Having decided to send a force to the imperiled family's assistance, I determined to send every man I had. This would give them the greatest strength in face of danger and throw all the responsibility for the safety of the ship upon me. If she were attacked during their absence I would be killed. I didn't wish any one killed with me. I preferred to take all the risk or none.

"I ordered a boat lowered and every man on board in it. The planter got into the stern with the coxswain in order to direct the course. I put the party under the command of an old salt named O'Neill and told him that if he saw anything to cause him to suspect treachery to tumble the planter overboard and return at once. The men pulled out, and I watched them in the shimmer till they were lost under the bank.

"They had scarcely disappeared when I saw a boat coming from the shore on which they were to land, but more nearly opposite the vessel.

"I knew in a moment that I had been tricked. The swimmer had come to lure away my men in order that a force might loot the ship. In all my seafaring life, with all its dangers, death never seemed so near to me. I resolved to make the best fight I could and kill as many of my enemies as possible. I had aboard plenty of muskets, cutlasses and a few hand grenades. I ran below, gathered half a dozen muskets, two pistols, two cutlasses and a stock of hand grenades. The muskets and pistols I loaded, then carried the outfit on deck, depositing it amidships on the side the boat was approaching. By the time I was ready for a fight the boat was within a cable's length of me.

"'Boat ahoy!' I cried. 'Keep off!'

"They stopped rowing, and a negro's voice called out:

"'Cap'n, can't yo' give us a little liquor? We hain't had nothin' to drink fo' a long spell.'

"'You keep off or I'll give you hot shot!'

"I heard a discussion in a low tone in the boat, then every oar dipped in the water at once, and they made a spurt straight for the ship. I dropped the man at the tiller with a musket ball and fired another shot among the oarsmen. The loss of their coxswain and the wounding of two men at the oars occasioned the check I hoped for. The two wounded men were both seated on the port side of the boat, and when they were disabled the others pulled the boat around to the starboard, exposing a broadside.

"A man in the bow holding a long pole with an enormous hook on the end was evidently the leader of the party, and he made an efficient chief. I heard him tell his men in negro dialect that there was only one man aboard the ship, that there was enough loot there to buy the freedom of every one of them and that it might be possible for them to take the ship and sail away with her. Then he ordered the places of the disabled men filled, equalizing the crew on both sides, and under his direction the boat was headed for the ship.

"I felt that my life depended on picking off that man standing in the bow with his grappling hook. I aimed straight for his head, but at the moment the boat lurched, and I missed him. I fired again and saw him stagger, but I could not have wounded him severely, for he maintained his post.

"My stock of loaded muskets was now half exhausted, and I did not from the first calculate on reloading. But I hadn't even time to use one of those that were charged, for the boat's nose struck the ship's side, and while one of the men below used an ordinary boat hook the leader endeavored to put his grappler over the gunwale. I fought it off with a cutlass till several of the men in the boat jumped into the water and swam for the anchor chain.

"Here was a division of the attacking force which I had dreaded from the first. I did what I should have done as soon as the boat struck the ship. Seizing a hand grenade, I threw it down on to the boat. It struck the water and did not explode. The man with the long hook had by this time got it fastened over the gunwale and was climbing up by the pole hand over hand, carrying on one arm the end of a rope ladder. He was an athletic rascal and brave as he was strong. The distance he must climb was not over half a dozen feet. I waited till he had come within a yard of the gunwale, then reached over and clove his skull with a cutlass. He dropped back into the boat in which there were but three others, and I saw that his loss caused confusion and faint heartedness among them.

"I now had two sets of men to deal with; but, their leader having been put out of the fight, I felt more hope than at any time since the attack. Without giving the men in the boat time to recover I seized another hand grenade and, poising it with a deliberate aim, hurled it down on those below. It struck the bottom of the boat, exploded and blew both boat and men to smithereens.

"What I have told you as having occurred after the men started to swim for the bow occupied only a portion of a minute. As soon as one party was destroyed I turned my attention to the other. Three men were swimming forward, and before I had time to form a plan one of them had swung himself up on to the chains under the bowsprit, another was within a few yards of the anchor chain, while the third was still some distance away from anything to cling to. Seizing a cutlass, I ran forward. It was not my only weapon, for I had two loaded pistols in my belt. Running under the gunwale on the deck that I might not be seen, I appeared on the bowsprit just as the foremost man was laying a hand on it. With my cutlass I dropped him into the water.

"I now realized for the first time that I was in no further danger. There were two men against me, but they had no other weapon than cold steel, while I had the advantage of position and a loaded pistol. I had shed enough blood, so I called to the man climbing the anchor chain to let go or I would shoot him. He dropped into the water and struck out for the shore, followed by the man who had lagged behind.

"They had scarcely swum out of sight when I heard the sound of oars, and, turning, there but a few hundred yards away was the boat I had sent on an errand of mercy. When the crew came aboard the fugitives had reached the shore. My men had heard my first shot, and the planter took to a thicket. Fearing trouble, they returned, but too late to be of service.

"I believe I would have concealed the facts of the narrow escape I had had if I could have done so. But since the boat's crew had heard the reports of my firearms, and especially the detonation of the hand grenade, I was obliged to give them the story. There were some doubters as to the number of men I had beaten off. The tide had carried away the leaders of the negroes, but the morning brought some of them back again to prove my statement. A party on shore got wind of the matter and came out to hear about the dispute between one man and a dozen negroes—as they gave the number—only two of the attacking party escaping with their lives. This put a different complexion on the matter, and, the crew being convinced of the truth of my version of the story, I found myself in the position of a hero. I was referred to after that as the man who had fought twelve, killed eight and never got a scratch. Even that leaves out the two I might have killed."

Things Are Changed Now.

The Fourth of July, the day of our arrival at Albany, was the anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, and on our arrival we were told that great preparations were making for its celebration.

Our landlord, as soon as he found out who we were, immediately came to us to request that we would excuse the confused state in which his house was, as this was the anniversary day of "American independence," or, as some indeed more properly call it, "American repentance." We were all of us not a little surprised at this address, and from such a person. Instances, however, are not wanting of people openly declaring that they have never enjoyed so much quiet and happiness in their own homes since the Revolution as they did when the states were the colonies of Great Britain. Among the planters of Virginia I have heard language of this sort more than once.—From "Travels Through the States of North America," by Isaac Weld, Jr., 1795.

A Wedding Hoax.

There have been many foolish hoaxes since the days of Theodore Hook, but few so cruel as one mentioned by Bram Stoker in his book, "Famous Impostors." "A young couple were about to be married in Birmingham when those officiating were startled by the delivery of a telegram from London with the message: 'Stop marriage at once. His wife and children have arrived in London and will come on to Birmingham.' The bride fainted, and the bridegroom was frantically perturbed at thus summarily being provided with a wife and family. But it was useless—the unhappy man had to make the best of his way through an exasperated crowd, full of sympathy for the wronged girl. Inquiry, however, showed her friends that the whole thing was a hoax—possibly worked by some revengeful rival of the man whose happiness had been so unexpectedly deferred."

Found the Word.

The late Thomas Lowry of Minneapolis was a great wit and a great story teller as well as a great financier. He needed $1,000,000 one time for one of his railroad enterprises, and he went to New York to get it. On the morning of his arrival a friend met him at the hotel and asked, "What are you doing, Tom?"

"I am going downtown to get $1,000,000."

"Can you do it?"

"My boy," said Lowry impressively, "in the bright lexicon of youth there is no such word as fail."

That night Lowry came back to his hotel after a hard day. The same friend met him. "Did you get the million?" he asked.

"No," replied Lowry. "I didn't. I opened that bright lexicon of youth, and the word was in it."—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

Anecdotes of Richter.

Dr. Richter will forgive us, we are sure, for telling two rehearsal stories about him. Madam X. was singing at a rehearsal and was decidedly out of tune. Dr. Richter stood it as long as he could, then turned to her. "Madam," he said, "will you kindly give the orchestra your A?"

At another rehearsal one of the instrumentalists made a mistake. "No," said Dr. Richter; "it goes so (humming)—rum-tum-tarum!" The same player made another mistake. "No, no—rum-tum-tarum!" At the third mistake Dr. Richter momentarily lost patience and cried, "Why do you make so many mistakes, Mr. —?" Then quickly recovering his habitual good humor, "Ah, I know why it is—you like to hear me sing!"—Manchester Guardian.

The Old Sod.

At the breaking of ground for one of the new buildings for the Catholic university at Washington the late Archbishop Ryan was present, and Cardinal Gibbons was officiating. The cardinal turned over a large piece of grass covered earth when it was discovered that there had been a hitch in the ceremony.

"Well," said the cardinal, "I suppose that we will have to dig another sod."

"Oh, no, no!" said Archbishop Ryan. "Never go back on the old sod!"—Philadelphia Times.

The Retort Caustic.

"No, indeed," said the conceited young puppy who had been asked whether he had attended a certain select dance. "I—aw—only associate with my equals, you know."

"Really?" responded a witty young lady. "You should aim higher than that!"—London Telegraph.

The Proof.

"If your wife is such a terribly good cook why don't you eat more dinners at home?"

"Gee! How would I know how good she could cook if I didn't eat somewhere else?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Matinee Idol.

"He's a stickler for realism."

"Yes, but he carries it to excess. In the second scene he is supposed to be severely wounded, and he has a surgeon issue bulletins between the acts."—Pittsburg Post.

Large Order.

"Your own baby, if you have one," advertised the enterprising photographer, "can be enlarged, tinted and framed for $9.75 a dozen."—Blue Bull.

G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT

Veterans Hold Successful Annual Reunion at Scranton.

In patriotic attire for what was one of the greatest events in its history, Scranton this week extended a welcome to the Grand Army men, with their wives and daughters, who participated in the annual encampment. In connection with the State encampment, the Grand Army's auxiliaries, the Women's Relief Corps and the Ladies of the G. A. R., conducted their annual conventions.

Responding to the appeal of the local veterans who directed the arrangements, business men and householders throughout the city decorated their buildings with flags and bunting. The committee asked that the national colors be used exclusively in the decorations, and the request was complied with. There was a distinct absence of the garish decorations that are usually in evidence during convention periods.

Another interesting feature of the arrangements was that the veterans scorned the offer of automobiles for their parade, which was the big event of the encampment. Numerous automobilists volunteered to furnish conveyances for the "boys" but the offers were turned down with firm emphasis.

Next in importance was a reunion and campfire in the American town hall. Speeches by veterans and reminiscences of stirring incidents of camp and battleground made up the bulk of the program, and there was the music that caused the thrills back in '61. Commander-in-Chief Gillman, of Boston, was one of the principal speakers at the campfire.

The encampment opened Monday, that day being set aside for committee meetings and preliminary organization work. The regular session of the convention was held on Tuesday and the campfire and reunion Tuesday evening. Wednesday was parade day, and on Thursday, the last day of the encampment, the visitors will be taken on sightseeing tours around the city and over the Elmhurst boulevard.

After Butter and Eggs.

Vigorous prosecution of the government's suit to enjoin the Chicago Butter and Egg Board from controlling prices of butter and eggs is expected to follow the recent decisions of the United States Supreme Court in the oil and tobacco trust cases.

The first step in this direction was taken at Chicago last week when Judge Kohlsaat in the United States circuit court, on motion of Federal District Attorney Sims, referred the case to Charles B Morrison, who will take evidence.

It is charged that the quotations committee of the board hold daily sessions, approximate the quantity of eggs and butter on hand, and arrange the market price accordingly, to the material benefit of themselves.

Will Soon Raise the Maine.

Without precedent in engineering practice and projecting only a foot or two above high tide level, the cofferdam built around the wreck of the battleship Maine in Havana harbor is assured of success in the opinion of army engineers. The land-locked harbor is not disturbed by high waves and engineers say that if the dam should ever be threatened with flooding from the top its height could be easily augmented.

Pumping out of the water probably will begin about June 15. It has been delayed because of the steel rails driven to interlock the circular tubes that make the wall were bent, permitting water to pass through. Limited facilities handicap straightening these rails.

BUMPING MR. BRYAN.

"The Republican" derives no little amusement as we stand off and view the squabble among the Democratic bosses at Washington. It is rather interesting to note the recent outcry against the Hon. William Jennings Bryan by Speaker Champ Clark, Chairman Underwood and the Hon. Woodrow Wilson, Governor of New Jersey. All three, to say nothing of a great many more Democrats, are loudly and bitterly denouncing Mr. Bryan. He is being held up as a malicious party wrecker. Nothing in the category of burning abuse has been overlooked in the frenzy of his fellow party bosses to show their present contempt for the thrice-defeated candidate for President.

It is but a few weeks ago that Clark and Wilson were tossing boquets at the erstwhile "peerless" leader. Both being avowed aspirants for the Democratic nomination for President next year, Messrs. Clark and Wilson fairly outdid each other in their efforts to secure a public indorsement from Mr Bryan. The latter was, however, too foxy to publicly commit himself to any candidate save the Hon. William Jennings Bryan. Now comes a terrific onslaught upon Mr. Bryan in the house of his supposed friends, led by none other than Mr. Clark and Mr. Wilson and Chairman Underwood, the Democratic boss on the floor of the House.

Mr. Bryan, with a bluntness for which he is noted, publicly declared that since the Democrats had for years been championing free wool they should now vote for free wool and not for a tariff on wool, even though reduced from the rate specified in the Aldrich—Payne bill. The Democrats having been crying out that wool should and would be placed on the free list if they ever got a chance at it, Mr. Bryan became a means most annoying to his colleagues been insisting that it now be placed on the free list and not supplanted by a half-baked proposition.

Because of this Mr. Bryan has encountered the ill will of those who but a few short weeks ago were assuring him of their eternal love and adoration. Speaker Clark is out in the open against free wool. So is Governor Wilson. Likewise Chairman Underwood. All three now declare that to place wool on the free list will be to plunge the country into financial turmoil. Their argument is that the country is not quite ready for such a radical change. Their remedy is not to take off the tariff on wool but to reduce it. They have no hankering to assume the responsibility for forcing upon the country something for which the country is "not quite ready." Several years from now, they venture, will be ample time. The time they fix is along about that period when the Republicans will again be in control. The Democrats cry loudest for free wool when the Republicans are in power and when the former are quite sure there is no danger of their cry being answered. Now that they have the opportunity to prove their sincerity in advocating free wool the Democrats are the very first to insist on a tariff on that article.

While Mr. Bryan is seemingly being made the under dog in the present family controversy, there are some Democrats, at least, who uphold him in his theory of party consistency. They, too, seem to take the view that if the Democratic party is sincerely for free wool the time to demonstrate that fact is while they are in control of the House. They are not to be blamed if at last the scales have been removed from their eyes and they are able to see for themselves that the Democratic cry for free wool is loudest during and intended solely for the campaign.

Meanwhile, Republicans are to be excused if they find cause for a good, hearty laugh over the Democratic pot calling the Democratic kettle black.

What Pennsylvania Overlooks.

The wisdom of establishing a public utilittes commission such as Gov. TENER recently urged upon the Legislature, as an instrumentality in the interest of the people, is strikingly illustrated by an incident that is just recorded in New York. In that state, after careful investigation, the Public Service Commission has ordered sweeping reductions in certain local telephone rates in the metropolitan district by which more than $1200,000 a year will be saved to the public. At the same time the commission expresses the belief that, while there will be this great economy on certain service which has heretofore been used, the modification in tolls which has been made will develop an amplified demand for the telephone which will more than reimburse the company for its loss by reductions without putting it to new outlay. The commission has simply applied the rule of reason to former charges and has directed that the company shall not collect excessive tolls.

As is usual in controversies over rates, the company pleaded the relation of fixed charges to service and the right also to earn a fair return on its investments and property. But here it overstepped the mark, putting into its figures no less than $40,000,000 of intangible assets. That is, it placed a valuation of $30,000,000 on its franchises, which were granted by the people and for which it paid nothing, and another $10,000,000 as "a going concern.' These elements undoubtedly are of enormous value, and in case of a sale might properly be accounted as assets, but to say that the public is in duty bound, when obtaining service, to pay a sufficient toll to return interest on these amounts is not tenable, according to the commission.

This development is particularly interesting to Pennsylvania people at this juncture and to the friends of the governor who stood with him in his struggle for the creation of a similar commission in our state. His primary purpose was to secure adequate service from all utilities concerns at a reasonable charge. That this can be done without destruction of the affected corporatious or impairment of their legitimate earning powers is being demonstrated in a number of sister commonwealths, and eventually Pennsylvania will come to a like system regulation.—Pittsburg Gazette Times.

Rev. Dr. A. M. Schmidt, pastor of the Bellefonte St. John's Reformed church, departed on Tuesday for Lancaster, where he attended the annual commencement of Franklin and Marshall college.

The Bellefonte High School alumni dance in the Armory on Tuesday evening was a delightful success. The Armory was tastefully decorated for the occasion. The attendance was quite large and all had a most enjoyable time.

Walter Furst, who holds a very desirable position in New Haven, Conn., arrived in Bellefonte on Tuesday for the Curtin-Potter wedding and also to enjoy a little visit with his mother, Mrs. A. O. Furst. He will return to New Haven tomorrow.

Mrs. Charles K. Rath, who had been visiting in Bellefonte for two weeks, returned on Tuesday to her home at Elizabeth, N. J. She was accompanied by Miss Helen Ceader, who will remain at Elizabeth for several days and then go to Baltimore, Md., where she will visit friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lane and two children, of McKeesport, are enjoying a little visit with Mr. Lane's mother, Mrs. James B. Lane. They made the trip to Bellefonte in their automobile, being accompanied by J. Thomas Mitchell, of Bellefonte, who last week spent several days in Pittsburg.

William J. Dorworth, who is located at Greensboro, North Carolina, spent Sunday at the home of his parents, Dr. and Mrs. E. S. Dorworth. He reported that the big cotton crop this year has given the South a business boom quite in striking contrast to the dullness that has been the case in the North for several months.

The Bellefonte Academy baseball club on Friday of last week won what proved to be the best game of the season, defeating the strong Susquehanna team, 2-1. The game was a toss-up from start to finish and was only won by the Academy in the ninth inning. Symes pitched for the Academy and in the ninth inning he had the satisfaction of making a hit which scored the winning run. The game was the last of the season for the Academy. On Friday evening the annual reception was held at the Academy and was largely attended by the friends and patrons of the school. The buildings and lawn were prettily decorated and lighted for the occasion. Following the reception the annual dance was held in the Bush Arcade Hall and proved to be one of the most enjoyable social functions of the season in Bellefonte. Examinations were the order this week at the Academy and the school closes tomorrow for the summer. It has been the most successful year in the history of the Academy.

Bernard Long, the obliging clerk and waiter in the C. H. Lucas restaurant and ice cream parlor, in company with his lady friend, Miss Mary Hinton, went to Lock Haven on a visit last Wednesday and naturally all sorts of rumors were current as to the purport of the visit. "The Republican's" correspondent endeavored to get a confession out of "Bern" but all we could get was that it was one of his employer's stories to stimulate custom.

The school board met on Monday and settled up the business of the past year. The settlement showed a balance of about $700 cash on hand and about $500 due on back taxes. They reorganized by placing the same men in office as had filled the several places heretofore, viz: President, H. C. Holter; secretary C. H. Pletcher; treasurer, Dr. W. J. Kurtz. Prof. F. M. Pletcher was re-elected principal of the schools for another year. The election of teachers for the other grades was held over until the July meeting.

Wild and Woolly Democracy.

That was a weird resolution that the Democratic caucus adopted, and which was subsequently read in the House, so that the country might have information concerning the flop of the party leaders. When Bryan declared that these leaders in abandoning free raw wool were abandoning the long-time policy of the Democratic Party, he spoke truly. But what would you? Here is a party in control of the House and this House leadership has discovered that to put wool on the free list would knock a tremendous hole in the government's revenue. So it contents itself with a half-way proceeding—cuts the duty in half.

The "depletedand depleting" condition of the treasury, reads the caucus excuse for pledge-breaking. Depleting? What does that mean, when the treasury is constantly gaining? Perhaps it looks ahead to the good old days—if they should ever come—when, under a tariff smashing crusade, the treasury would be in a constant depleting condition. If these wild and woolly Democrats could only put through their free list and could slash away at wool and woolen products, even to the extent that they contemplate, there would be plenty of depletion.

But they have got to capture the Senate first—and the Presidency.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Died in Ohio.

Word was received in Bellefonte on Friday of last week of the death of George H. Harman, who passed away at his late residence at Portsmouth, Ohio. Deceased was a former resident of Bellefonte but in more recent years he lived in Ohio. He was born at Pleasant Gap, February 26, 1860, and was a son of Henry and Sarah Harman. From Pleasant Gap the family removed to Milesburg and from there to Bellefonte, finally going to Portsmouth. For a time the deceased was in the employ of McCalmont & Company, of this place. He also served as an agent for the Singer Sewing Machine Co. Surviving are a widow, Mrs. Sarah E. Harman, of Bellefonte; his mother, Mrs. Henry Harman, of Portsmouth, and also the following sisters and brothers: Mrs. Hallie Ellison and Mrs. Minerva Fritts, of Portsmouth; Mrs. Elizabeth Leonard, of Hazleton; Professor D. A. Harman, of Hazelfon, and William B. Harman, of Mifflin County. Funeral services were held on Sunday, interment being made at Portsmouth.

HAD SUDDEN DEATH

William H. Poorman, of Bellefonte, Passed Away on Monday Afternoon.

Walking into his home on Monday afternoon and complaining of a sharp pain in his chest, William H. Poorman was seized with an attack of heart failure and died before those about him could render him any assistance. Mr. Poorman had been at work during the day shingling the roof of his home. He ate a hearty dinner and when he resumed work in the afternoon was in exceptionally cheerful spirits. Shortly after 3 o'clock he became ill and climbing down from the roof made his way into the house. His death followed a moment or two later. Mr. Poorman was a splendid type of citizen and the news of his death was received with sorrow in the community.

Deceased was a son of John and Catherine Fetzer Poorman and was born on Marsh Creek, November 10, 1844, making his age 67 years, 6 months and 26 days. During the last eight years he, with his family, resided in Bellefonte. Surviving are a widow and two daughters, Mrs. J. W. Oglesby, of Gravette, Arkansas, and Miss Etta Poorman, at home.

Funeral services were held today at 9 o'clock, conducted by Rev. J. F. Hower, pastor of the United Evangelical church. Interment was made at the Advent cemetery.

Mrs. Harry Harris Dead.

The Philipsburg Journal, on Friday, last, published the following: Mrs. Sarah A., wife of Harry Harris, of Troy, passed away this morning at 7:45. Her death resulted from a cancerous affection from which she had been suffering more or less for eight years, her condition the past six months growing more critical with each passing day. Abandoning all hope of recovery, she became resigned to the will of the Master and awaited patiently the hour when death should relieve her of her sufferings, expressing over and over her faith in Christ and readiness to meet Him, and passing away in the hope of a blissful immortality.

The deceased was born in Bellefonte on June 17, 1870, making her age 40 years, 11 months and 16 days. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ammerman, the father now deceased. She was married to Harry Harris, of Philipsburg, on July 12, 1898, and came directly here, where she has since resided. Besides her husband and mother, she leaves two sons and two daughters, viz: William A., Frederick H., Minnie E. and Ruth L. Three brothers also survive—John and Austin, of Bellefonte, and William, of Mt. Carmel, Pa.

Died at Tyrone.

Shortly after 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon Mrs. Mary Jane Porter died at her home in Tyrone from Bright's disease. Mrs. Porter had been ill for several years and had spent a good portion of that time in bed. Throughout all her intense sufferings she was patient and cheerful and her demise is indeed a hard blow for the bereaved family, as well as her many friends. She was born at Pennsylvania Furnace on March 22, 1850, and became a resident of Tyrone about twenty-two years ago. She was the widow of the late Major John M. Porter. Surviving her are one son and one daughter, viz: James, of Boise City, Idaho, and Mrs. Charlotte Hiltner, of Tyrone. She also leaves one brother and one sister, James and Margaret Carson, of Tyrone. She was a life long member of the Presbyterian church. Funeral services were held at the late home, Tuesday evening at 8, o clock by the pastor, Rev. J. C. Day, of the First Presbyterian church. The remains were taken to Pennsylvania Furnace Wednesday morning and interment made at Graysville.

Death at Boalsburg.

Mary, widow of the late Jacob Weber, died at her late home, at Boalsburg, on Sunday afternoon, last, at 4.20 o'clock, her death following an operation earlier in the day. She had been in failing health for some time, due to liver trouble. Deceased was a daughter of the late Judge Riley, of Boalsburg, and was born June 30, 1864. Her husband preceded her to the grave, passing away on Thanksgiving Day. Surviving are one sister, Mrs. Frank Whitehill, of Lemont; one brother, Edward Riley, of Boalsburg, and seven children, all at home. Funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Samuel Martin. Interment was made at Boalsburg.

Died in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Eleanor Watson, wife of the late Mitchell Watson, died on April 26, 1911, at her late residence, 2741 North Twenty-ninth Street, Philadelphia. Mr. and Mrs. Watson were former and well known residents of Centre County. They were members of the Presbyterian church. Four sons and six daughters survive: Johnson, Nelson and James, of Centre County, and Mitchell, of of Brookville; Mrs. R. G. Askey, of Altoona; Mrs. A. F. Landis, of Bellefonte; Mrs. William Lentz, Mrs. E. W. Kurst, Mrs. F. I. Maul and Miss Myrtle C. Watson, of Philadelphia. Funeral services were held in Philadelphia and interment made in the Fernwood cemetery, at that place.

Justice of The Plains

Which Was Never Executed

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

There was not the slightest doubt that Jim Russell had stolen Harry Barry's favorite horse. Every man on the Lone Bull outfit looked to his own horse when it was learned that the new cowpuncher had not slept in his bed the night before.

"It's on you, Harry," said Gabriel with meaning emphasis as they trooped in to breakfast.

"And I can take care of it," announced that gentleman impressively. All the merry light had gone out of his brown eyes, and his pleasant mouth wore an ugly, determined look which his comrades had never seen before.

They fell to discussing Jim Russell and the ill reputation which he had borne in Arizona, whence he had drifted northward to the Lone Bull ranch. Many horses had been laid against his reputation, but there had never been any proof.

After the meal was concluded Harry Barry, who had maintained for him an unusual silence, obtained from Boss Clintock leave of absence to hunt his stolen beast. Declining all offers of assistance, he mounted a wiry little scrub which he had captured and broken himself and which was utterly tireless in the chase and followed a freshly broken trail that led aside from well defined paths straight into the prairie.

Once he dismounted to examine the clean imprint of a small hoof, and he grunted as he recognized the little triangular nick made by Nelly's notched fore foot.

"Cur!" he muttered as he rode onward, his eyes ever on the lookout for the first blurring shadow of a distant horse and rider. Russell must have been riding since daylight, and Nelly would be tired by this time, for Harry had pushed her cruelly the day before. It had been a hard day, for the cattle along Saltpeter creek had stampeded and the cattlemen had worked until 10 o'clock before the restive creatures were composed enough to leave with the regular herdsman.

After it was all over and they had partaken of hot coffee before going to bed Russell had come and sat beside his bunk and yarned to Harry of the Arizona country and told him much about a girl who was willing to marry him, only her father had heard so much about his bad reputation that he had forbidden his daughter to see Jim Russell.

"I've got a mind to rustle her off some day jest as I would a bunch of cattle, if I was that kind of a chap," said the aggrieved young lover.

"Are you asking my advice?" asked Harry Barry bluntly.

"No, but you are welcome to give it. Fire away," said the other good naturedly.

"Why don't you prove to the old man that you ain't what you're said to be? It's easy to prove you're in the right—if you are!" he added.

"Well," said Jim thoughtfully, "I reckon I've got to tell somebody. It's this way, Harry. We want to get married and go over to Star Lake, where I can get a foreman job with the lumber company and cut out the cattle business forever. I haven't got $10 to my name, but Louise is willing to go with me, and she promised that any time I give the signal she'll bring a few things and go with me. It's a fifty mile ride to Star Lake, where the parson is and where there's a little house waiting for us—only, you see, I've got to get hold of a horse that'll take me the whole distance without stopping much, for old man Snyder will hot foot it after us with his whole outfit as soon as he discovers we've lit out. Louise has got her own horse, the fastest critter on the range except your Nelly, and I want to know if you won't let me have your critter for the purpose—eh, Harry?"

"Nary Nelly," said Harry Barry fretfully, for he was half asleep and resented being kept from his well earned slumbers by any man's love affairs.

Jim Russell had gone quietly away, and the next morning Nelly had been missing, and so had been the handsome young scapegrace who had come to the Lone Bull with a reputation painted three shades blacker than a crow, but to whom good natured Clintock had vouchsafed a trial.

Harry Barry riding across the plain in the direction of Star lake found himself pitying Louise Snyder, who was throwing her life away on the reprobate who had stolen a horse with which to elope with her. Of course Harry Barry realized that Jim Russell had tried to borrow Nelly for the occasion, and that showed a degree of decency he had not attributed to his late comrade.

But the thought of his horse rankled in his mind, and he was quite determined that when he met with Jim Russell, as he undoubtedly would before noon, as the girl would have to rest at intervals, he would show no mercy to that horse thief and he would kill two birds with one stone. He would bring a long wanted horse thief to justice, and at the same time he would save Louise Snyder from a marriage with a most unscrupulous rogue.

It had rained the night before, and there still remained a certain sponginess of the soil that held the telltale traces of Nelly's hoofs. Now, there was the trail of another horse, and by the deep indentation Harry Barry knew that they had been hard ridden. He looked ahead where the hazy outline of the Flower ranges might afford a refuge for the elopers. He looked behind him and saw a man pounding along on a tall, rawboned white horse.

"Old man Snyder and riding like the devil," he muttered. "Hope he doesn't pick me for Russell. I'll have to get a drop on him first." He flashed out his pistol and had Mr. Snyder's fat hands high in the air as soon as he heard the young cattleman's stern command.

"W'y, Mr. Barry, I think you must mistake me fer a rustler—eh?" he smiled ingratiatingly at Harry Barry.

"It's best to be sure, you know, Mr. Snyder," grinned Harry impudently. "By the way you was lighting after me I got the idea you was trying to run me off the range, and you know us Lone Bull fellows don't let nobody do that."

"Oh, no, far from such bizness!" explained Mr. Snyder impatiently. "I gotta more important matter. That blamed scoundrel of a Jim Russell, he's run away with my daughter, my Louise! If I catch 'em I'll skin him alive."

"If he don't skin you first," said Harry Barry coolly.

"Why should he skin me, eh?" sputtered Mr. Snyder. "What have I done to him, eh?"

"You've taken away his character, you know."

Mr. Snyder stared incredulously. "Taken away his character?" he said slowly. "W'y man, I didn't know Jim Russell had any character."

"Can you prove it?"

The father of Louise scratched his ear thoughtfully. "I can't prove it this minit," he admitted guardedly, "but I reckon I could by writing down to Arizona, where he's from."

"I wouldn't do it," advised Harry Barry. "Jim Russell will probably be married to Louise by that time, and anything you said against him would only be a reflection on your own family. How would you like to have anybody stir up your past?" he asked innocently.

Casper Snyder started violently and looked at Harry Barry keenly. "What do you mean?" he demanded, with a red face.

"What I said," returned Harry, flicking the reins on his horse's neck. "You going my way, Mr. Snyder?"

The elder man looked down at the ground and bit his lips thoughtfully. If he pursued Jim Russell to the death, as he had planned in his first burst of vengeful fury, somebody—perhaps this impudent young Barry—might revive some of those old rumors which had preceded his own advent into this cattle country. Possibly he might find a place for Louise's husband on his ranch and thus keep his favorite daughter at home. At the same time he could keep an eye on his son-in-law.

"I think I'll go home," he said abruptly. "If you should meet up with my daughter, Mr. Barry, you kin tell her that her father says he don't mind if she takes a ride with—with that Jim Russell, but that he commands her to come home and get married!"

"I'll tell her," said Harry Barry heartily as he waved a farewell at the old man and went on his way.

When he reached the cool shadows of the Flower range he eased his horse and rode with slackened rein. He was dead tired, and the day was almost spent. As yet he had not come up with the man who had taken his horse.

He was riding up a little canyon when the rattle of falling stones brought him sharply face about, and he saw the man he was looking for not ten feet to the right of him. Jim Russell, white and desperate looking, stood at bay behind the little black horse Nelly. Louise Snyder was nowhere in sight, but Harry Barry had no doubt her fair frightened face was hidden behind the clump of dwarfed pines.

"Well?" he said sharply to Russell without making a move to draw his weapons, although a six shooter gleamed in the other's hand.

Russell drew near until he was close beside his pursuer. "I took your horse, Harry," he whispered hoarsely, "but I want you to believe me when I take my oath that this is the first time I ever did steal a horse, no matter what they say about me."

"I believe you," said Harry Barry, with the old merry look in his eyes, "but I've promised to take you back with me just the same."

"Where to?" asked the other, hastily backing away.

"Your pa-in-law wants that you and Louise should come to the ranch and be married," said Harry Barry, all resentment gone from his soul, for somehow he could not blame Jim Russell for wanting to marry pretty Louise Snyder, and anyhow, Harry reasoned, life was hard enough for folks without his making it any worse. Very likely Louise would be disappointed in her dashing husband, and perhaps Jim Russell would feel sometimes that the tyranny of old Casper Snyder would be hardly worth the acquisition of a wife, yet he knew that there might be a foundation to their love which would outlast these trials.

"Wants us to come to the ranch and be—married, did you say, or be shot?" demanded Jim Russell incredulously.

"Married," repeated Harry Barry firmly, "and to be sure there won't be any mistake about the matter I'm going to ride over to Salt Petre and fetch the sky pilot myself. I'll ride on ahead if you want to fetch Louise."

"God bless you, Harry!" muttered Jim Russell under his breath, and those words coming from him promised a fairer future for Louise than any one might have predicted.

Explosives In Your Body.

The human body contains no fewer than four substances which are so inflammable that in a pure state they will "go off" by spontaneous combustion. For instance, there is phosphorus. The body of a person weighing 120 pounds contains twenty-two ounces of this substance, which, as everybody knows, readily takes fire of its own accord if exposed to the air. It is combined with lime to make the bones, taking the form of phosphate lime. The body of a human being weighing 120 pounds contains nearly one and a half ounces of magnesium, two ounces of sodium and nearly two and a half ounces of potassium. The first of these, a substance of silvery whiteness, is so readily and fiercely combustible that it has to be kept tightly corked in bottles to prevent it from igniting of its own accord. Sodium will take fire if thrown into water, and so likewise will potassium—the latter with great violence, finally exploding and throwing a shower of sparks into the air.—New York World.

Hospital Fighters.

Into a hospital came two men with battered faces.

"Street fight?" said the surgeon in charge.

It was. Under the doctor's directions orderlies moved beds and patients around until the newcomers were separated the length of the ward.

"In this case that precaution may not be necessary," he said, "but after a street brawl it very often is. Before we learned the peculiarities of those people it happened more than once that two men who were mortal enemies were brought in and laid out side by side. Each saw his advantage and was foxy enough to keep still until both were left alone in adjoining cots; then they sailed into each other tooth and nail, trying to finish the job that had been interrupted in the street. Once or twice they nearly succeeded. Now chance patients with pugilistic tendencies are placed so far apart that a neighborly interchange of uppercuts is out of the question.—New York Press.

The Word "Chap."

"Chap" is simply an abbreviation of chapman, the merchant of former days, and is derived from the Anglo-Saxon "ceap," a bargain. The word almost brings before us the loud voiced "cheap Jack" as he cries his wares in the cheaping or market. Chap seems to have come into common use at the end of the sixteenth century and is rarely mentioned in books before 1700. Johnson does not recognize it, though Steele uses it in 1712 in the Spectator ("If you want to sell, here is your chap"), and it is found in Bailey's Dictionary, 1731. Its original meaning of a buyer or seller still lingers in the dialects of many counties. Coupled with the adjectives old, young, little, poor, it was and is used in familiar language, as is its relative, a queer "customer." Todd, 1818, affirms that a good chap meant one to whom credit might be given, whereas not qualified by good it was a term of contempt.—London Standard.

A Mighty Appetite.

We eat, but we no longer stuff. The great stuffers of the past are dead. What of that seventeenth century Kentish man Nicholas Wood, for example, who would eat a whole hog at a sitting and follow it up the next day with thirty dozen pigeons? Withal this possessor of a "Kentish stomach" was a sportsman. As proof of this there is that record of his challenge to Taylor, the water poet, to "eat at one time as much black pudding as would reach across the Thames at any place to be fixed by Taylor himself between London and Richmond." Well might old Fuller moralize over that appetite of Wood's. "Let us raise our gratitude," he said, "to the goodness of God, especially when he giveth us appetite enough for our meat and yet meat too much for our appetite."—Westminster Gazette.

The Moss Troopers.

Moss troopers was the name given to the desperate plunderers and robbers who secreted themselves throughout the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries in the "mosses" on the borders of Scotland. These outlaws were largely made up of deserters and criminals from the armies of England and the continent, and their depredations and cruelties were the terror of the region infested by them. Many severe laws were passed against them, but they were not fairly extirpated until the eighteenth century.

Watered.

"If you are looking for bargains," said the broker, "I can suit you. I can offer you some stocks at 10 cents a share."

"But why are they so cheap?" demanded the lady shopper.

"You see, they have been slightly damaged by water."—Washington Herald.

Two Historic Drinks.

Sir Philip Sidney received his death wound before the walls of Zutphen on Sept. 22, 1586. Parched with thirst, he called for a drink. As he was putting the bottle to his mouth his eyes fell upon a desperately wounded soldier who as he was being carried past threw him longing glances, "which Sir Philip perceiving took the bottle from his lips before he drank and delivered to the poor man with these words: 'Thy necessity is greater than mine.'"

At the battle of Ravenna in 1512, when the allied Spanish and papal forces were defeated by the renowned Gaston de Foix, Dumolard, one of his captains, played a conspicuous part. After a gallant charge, by which he had driven back the enemy, he determined to publicly drink the health of his enemy's brave ally, Jacob von Empser, the leader of the 5,000 German lasquenets. Wine was brought upon the field, and, having sat down, each hero filled his goblet. At that moment, while they were in the very act of pledging each other's health, a cannon ball from the enemy's lines killed them both.

Quick and Cheap Legal Work.

The French tribunal of commerce is presided over by a judge without a jury. The plaintiff's lawyer argues his own case before the judge, simply to show that he has a case and the nature of it. The defendant does not plead, but if he can disputes the facts. If the judge considers there is no case he dismisses the plaintiff. In the contrary case he appoints an assessor out of a dozen chosen yearly of the town's reputed merchants to decide upon it. The following day the assessor calls the parties to his room in the court. He hears each of them separately without any lawyers. Within fifteen minutes he gathers their documents and dismisses them. Two or three days later he communicates his judgment to the solicitors through the court, and the business is ended. The costs of lawyers and the court fees come to about £6 a side. The same case in England would take six months at least and cost no less than £150 for a claim of £50.—London Mail.

When Bismarck Went Dry.

Bismarck was not without superstition, and this always was noticeable on the eve of the new year. From 9 o'clock that night until after midnight he would not take water in any circumstances from a glass. It was an ancient tradition in the chancellor's family that any one who set the legend at defiance would pass through a serious illness. If another tradition is true the observance of the family legend must have been a sore trouble to the iron chancellor, for the Paris contemporary from which we take the foregoing says that Bismarck not only loved war, but beer and wines, especially French wines. He was not averse to punch and grog, but on New Year's eve grog was under the ban, for it contains water.—London Globe.

Gambling In Wood.

"To most people my business would seem to be devoid of chances," said a dealer in fine woods, "yet as a matter of fact I know of nothing that is more of a gamble. On every log of wood we buy we take a chance that the inside is as good as the outside. At a recent auction of fine woods in London my partner and I paid $9,000 for a mahogany log that looked all right so far as we could tell. If the inside was sound we stood to make a good profit, but worm holes or rotten spots at the core would mean a heavy loss. Not until we got the log to this country and got it opened up could we be certain. As a matter of fact this particular log was perfect, and we cleaned up $3,000 on the deal. But it was gambling pure and simple."—New York Sun.

Not From Politeness.

This was heard in an overcrowded Boston elevated train:

"Say, Dick," said the young man whose football tactics had won him a strap in the rush—"say, Dick, I've been riding in on the 'L' every morning except Sundays and holidays for two years, and I've never given up a seat to a lady yet."

"You're a polite one," sneered Dick.

"Nothing of the kind," retorted the young man. "I've never had a seat to give up."—Boston Post.

Sweet Sarcasm.

"Daddy, what makes your nose so dreadfully red?" asked a little boy of his father one day at dinner.

"The east wind, of course!" the father answered gruffly. "Pass that decanter and don't talk so much."

"Yes, Tommy," said the boy's mother sweetly, "pass your father the east wind and be careful not to spill any on the tablecloth!"—London Mail.

His "Turnout."

Clerkley—Isn't this earlier than your usual time for going home?

Barkley—Yes, but my wife said if I came out by the 3:45 she'd meet me with the carriage.

"I didn't know you kept a horse and carriage."

"Er—er—it's a baby and carriage."

One Marked Difference.

As we understand it, the difference between grand opera and the other kind is that there is very little of the former that can be whistled.—Albany Journal.

SIGNS NEW ROAD BILL

Governor Tener Also Appoints E. M. Bigelow to Head Department.

Governor Tener's approval of the Sproul Road bill and his appointment of E. M. Bigelow, of Pittsburgh, as State Highway Commissioner, has met with very general approbation in all sections of the State. Mr. Bigelow is an engineer of wide experience in public works. He was Director of Public Works in Pittsburgh for many years and is the father of the magnificent system of parks in that city.

Under Mr. Bigelow's direction the provisions of the Sproul bill, including the construction of 7,500 miles of main State highways, the routes of which are specified under the bill, will be carried out and with the millions that are made available for this purpose under the act Pennsylvania will have within the next few years one of the most modern systems of State highways in the country.

Mr. Bigelow was in consultation with Governor Tener in Harrisburg Friday and left for his home in Pittsburgh during the afternoon. His appointment as State Highway Commissioner has been announced and at the same time it was stated he would accept the position and would enter upon the duties of the office next Monday.

In signing the Sproul bill Governor Tener has made good one of his most notable campaign pledges and has lived up to the expectation of his friends.

The Sproul bill gives in detail 296 routes of State highways, connecting all the important cities and towns in Pennsylvania. These are to be taken over by the State and are to be improved according to the best scientific methods and maintained under direction of members of the staff of the State Highway Department. The bill carries an appropriation of $3,000,000 for starting this work during the next two years, after which it is believed that the proposed bond issue of $50,000,000 will become available. This has been approved by the recent Legislature, but requires the passage by another Legislature and the approval of the people at the polls before the bonds may be issued.

The bill also carries $1,000,000 for continuing the work of building roads by State aid, the counties and townships paying one-fourth of the cost and maintaining the roads after they are built. All routes to be used by the State are to be taken over by June 1, 1912, excepting toll roads, which are to be acquired by condemnation proceedings when needed. A sweeping reorganization of the State Highway Department is provided.

The salary of the State Highway Commissioner is increased from $6,500 to $8,000. Instead of a deputy at $3,600 and an assistant at $3,000, there are first and second deputies at $6,000 each, who, in the order of their precedence, shall be authorized to perform all the duties of the Commissioner in his absence. The Governor is to appoint an auditor for the department at $3,000, a chief engineer at $7,000, and engineer of bridges at $3,600; fifty superintendents of highways at $1,500 each, a chief draughtsman at $2,400, a chief clerk at $2,000, and may appoint, if necessary, fifteen assistants to the chief engineer, at $2,400 each, and four assistant draughtsmen at $1,800. Provision is also made for such clerks and stenographers as may be needed from time to time.

It is understood that Commissioner Hunter, who has been at the head of the department since it was created, will be offered one of the deputyships at practically his present salary. Commissioner Bigelow will return to Harrisburg next Monday to take charge of the department.

Customs Frauds on Knives.

The Government has started a crusade in New York against what Assistant District Attorney Carl E. Whitney says are extensive frauds in the importation of German cutlery. Mr. Whitney caused the arrest of Josef Landesburg, an importer of cutlery, on the charge of undervaluing four cases of German-made pocket-knives.

"It has been found," Mr. Whitney said, "that these frauds in the importation of German cutlery and hardware have been as extensive as those in woolen goods manufactured in England." As a result, it is charged, quantities of German-made cutlery have been sold here below the actual cost of manufacture of similar hardware in the United States. Mr. Landesberg was paroled in the custody of his counsel to furnish $3500 bail.

Your Neighbor's Experience.

How you may profit by it. Take Foley Kidney Pills. Geo. N. Barnhart, 919 8th Ave., Altoona, Pa., says: "During the last several years I suffered from backache and kidney trouble. The pains across my kidneys and hips were severe and upon arising I felt tired and worn out. The kidney action was irregular and caused much pain. I got Foley Kidney Pills and took them. Three bottles cured me completely and I am now as well as ever. My kidney action is normal and regular and I owe my recovery entirely to the use of Foley Kidney Pills, which I recommend strongly on every occasion." Sold by C. M. Parrish.

Japanese Logic.

A teacher of English in Japan recently gave as an examination question, "What is a ventilator?" Besides the number of answers that were approximately correct, there were two which indicated that the students must have been absent either in body or mind on the day when the schoolroom ventilator had been discussed. The first was, "The ventilator lives in the mountains;" the second, "Columbus was a great ventilator." When occasion offered the teacher reminded his class that attention and application are requisite for acquiring knowledge and seriously asked them why any one should have given an answer such as the one concerning Columbus. One of the best spokesmen in the class essayed an explanation somewhat as follows:

"Columbus brought new ideas back to the old world; he changed the current of thought and opened a great door into the new and outer world; therefore he was a great ventilator."—Youth's Companion.

Washing Your Hands.

When you go to the washstand and carefully wash your hands with a generous application of soap and hard brush do not think for an instant that your hands are clean. The tenacious microbe refuses to be disturbed and clings to the flesh throughout the whole operation. There are some chemical compounds which will dislodge the busy bacilli to a certain extent, but not entirely. According to the investigations of a medical authority of the Prussian army, the best results in the direction of giving the hands a sanitary cleaning are accomplished by the use of alcohol. A bath of pure alcohol will remove about 99 per cent of the germs. Where it is desired to clean the hands hygienically it is recommended that the hands be not first washed with water, for this will so adulterate the alcohol that it cannot accomplish its work as effectively as otherwise.

The Story of a Famous Hymn.

The famous hymn beginning "God moves in a mysterious way," known as "Cowper's Hymn," had its origin as follows: Cowper was all his life the victim of melancholia and more than once attempted suicide. One day, bent upon destroying himself, he got into a cab and ordered the driver to take him to a certain point on the river where he intended to drown himself. The cabman, noticing his strange appearance and feeling that all might not be right with him, drove him about the city and finally stopped in front of the poet's door. Stepping out and recognizing the old familiar surroundings and shocked at the thought of his narrow escape, Cowper exclaimed, "God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform," and, rushing in, immediately composed the immortal hymn.

The Man With a Cold.

The sympathy given to the man with a hard cold is purely perfunctory. We know, or at least we think we know, that he will not die. We know that he is thoroughly wretched, yet we are equally certain that in three days or so he will be coming upstairs two at a time. This does not comfort him, though he may know it himself. He therefore feels himself an outcast, a pariah. He is cut off from the ordinary human relations. If he so much as kisses his wife or child he is a blackguard, mentally self convicted of it. Nobody loves him, and he may go out into the kitchen and drink cough sirup.—Boston Transcript.

Keeping the Actors Clean.

Some years ago, when playing in Leeds, I started a swimming competition among the members of my company and to encourage them offered as a prize a silver loving cup (won, by the way, by the late Edward Lonnen). The event apparently created some interest in the town, and a friend heard two men engage in a discussion as follows:

First Man—I say, durst to know this 'ere Terry's given a coop to bes' swimmer i' company?

Second Man—Aye. What's that for?

First Man—Oh, I suppose it's to keep them play actors clean.—Edward Terry in Era Annual.

Not "a Royal Maggot."

I a royal maggot! I am a soldier, I come from the people, I have made myself! Am I to be compared with Louis XVI.? I listen to everybody, but my own mind is my only counselor. There are some men who have done France more harm than the wildest revolutionaries—the talkers and the rationalists. Vague and false thinkers, a few lessons of geometry would do them good.—Napoleon (Quoted in "The Corsican").

Cards on Sunday.

Pepys, the diarist, was greatly scandalized when he first saw cards played on a Sunday. "I did find the queen, the Duchess of York and another at cards, with the room full of ladies and great men, which I was amazed to see on a Sunday, having not believed, but contrarily flatly denied the same a little while since."

Small Things.

We are too fond of our own will. We want to be doing what we fancy mighty things, but the great point is to do small things when called to them in a right spirit.

The Tank.

Friend (to confirmed toper)—I don't see how you can drink so much. It's shocking. Toper—It shocks me too. It surprises me. I suppose it's just luck."

To give awkwardly is churlishness. The most difficult part is to give. Then why not add a smile?—La Bruyere.

Saved by a Witticism.

In February, 1844, when John Tyler was president, the Princeton made a trial trip down the Potomac under Captain R. F. Stockton. On board at the time were President Tyler, members of the cabinet, other notables and a large number of women. As was customary at that time, a salute was to be fired while passing Mount Vernon. Just as it was discharged the gun exploded at the breech, killing five persons and wounding several others. Those killed were Abel P. Upshur, secretary of state; Thomas W. Gilmer, secretary of the navy; Commodore Kennon, chief of the bureau of construction of the navy; Virgil Maxcy, ex-minister to The Hague, and Mr. Gardiner, former senator from New York.

William Wilkins, then secretary of war, was saved by a witticism. Seeing the gun about to be fired, he exclaimed jokingly, "Though secretary of war, I do not like this firing, and I believe I shall run." He thereupon left his position directly beside the gun and had just reached safety when the explosion occurred.

A Burning Glass In the Eye.

In the front part of each of our eyes is a convex lens of great power and clearness. It acts exactly like a burning glass. If a person was made to look at the sun, say, for half a minute his eye would actually start to burn up. The lens would focus the rays of the sun on the retina, and that part of the eye would immediately scorch and later would burn to a crisp. This can happen, however, only when one looks at the sun directly or in a mirror. If one holds a pin between the sun and the eye and looks at the pin, although the sun is in a direct line with the eye and although its rays are entering the eye, the eye is not hurt, because the rays are not focused inside the eyeball. This is the wonderful property the lens has, that of focusing objects at different distances. The means by which it does this are its power to change its curvature.—Chicago Record-Herald.

An Election Story From Hungary.

An electioneering story from Hungary, as told by Mr. R. W. Seton-Watson in "Corruption and Reform In Hungary:" "Not many years ago a noble count stood as candidate for a west Hungarian constituency and was in due course elected. Soon afterward a deputation of the electors visited him in Budapest, reminded him of his promises at the time of the election and asked him to use his influence in a certain direction. 'Why do you come to me?' asked the count. 'Why, because you are our representative,' the astonished peasants replied. 'Nothing of the kind,' said the count. 'I bought the constituency for £2,000. You all had your price—free lunches and free drinks into the bargain. I'm —— if I do anything for you. We are quits.' And in another minute the deputation found itself in the street."

Robespierre's Style of Dress.

Robespierre's manner of dress, even at the period when the demagogues affected the slovenliness and disorder of indigence in order to flatter the people, was clean, decent and precise as that of a man who respects himself in the eyes of others. His white powdered hair, turned up in clusters over his temples; a bright blue coat buttoned over his hips, open over the breast to display a white vest; short yellow colored breeches, white stockings and shoes with silver buckles, formed his invariable costume during the whole of his public life. It was said that he desired by thus never varying the style or color of his garments to make the same impression in the sight and imagination of the people as a medal of his face would have caused.—Lamartine's "History of the Girondists."

Very Sensitive.

"I don't know what I am going to do with that kid of mine. He's always getting into fights. I jerked him up for it the other day. 'What do you mean by fighting on the public streets like this?' I asked.

"'Well,' he said, 'Jimmy Montgomery said you were my father.'

"'Well, ain't I your father?

"'I s'pose you are, but a feller don't want it thrown up to him right in front of a crowd.'"—Boston Traveler.

A Taste For Soap.

Surely one of the queerest of tastes was that of the historian Prescott, of whose life in Rome Mrs. Hugh Fraser tells in "A Diplomatist's Wife In Many Lands." She says that he used to keep a cake of soap on his writing table and nibble at it constantly, "saying, when he was remonstrated with, that people should be clean inside as well as out."

Gumption on the Farm.

Named your farm yet?

The trouble with the honey-bee is that it doesn't carry honey at both ends.

No, lime is not good for potatoes; it favors scab. So does too much stable manure.

Now, please, don't let the mower rattle all to pieces. Keep it well oiled and every nut screwed up tightly, and don't let the knives or guards get dull.

Remember, brother farmer, that the hot weather and hard work tax the strength of your wife. She will enjoy going to the store with you and riding slowly home in the cool of the evening.

To keep moles from a bed, sink a closemesh wire netting a foot wide into the soil around, allowing it to extend about two inches about the surface. If you have no netting, use boards. Either will prevent the entrance of moles into the bed.

The harvest season is the most trying of the year. There is so much to be done, so little time to do it in and so few hands to accomplish it, that we are often at our wit's end. Let us, however, have a care lest we attempt too much and lest we put too great a burden upon the wife and daughter. The sanitariums are filled with men and women who have broken down from work and worry at middle life. The utmost that we can hope to gain is not worth such a fearful sacrifice.

Cut clover hay when about half the blossoms are brown; cut timothy just as the bloom is falling. Curing clover: Cut it as soon as the dew is off in the morning. At noon shake out the bunches, rake into windrows before evening dews get on it, and let it lie until next day. Next day shake out the hay as soon as the dew is off. You ought to be ready to haul, on a hot day, by eleven o'clock, or certainly after dinner. It spoils clover hay to get too dry. It should never be put into the barn when wet with rain or dew; but a little sap won't hurt it. Curing timothy: If the crop is not too heavy and rank, cut as soon as the dew is off, let it cure a few hours, rank into windrows, and haul to the barn the same day. If crop is rank, cut it in the afternoon; it will wilt some during the night and dew will not hurt it. Next day's sun will dry it in a few hours, when it can be raked into windrows; haul it to the barn in the early afternoon.—Farm Journal.

Locusts in Central Section.

Reports received by State Zoologist H. A. Surface from a number of Central Pennsylvania counties in the last few days indicate that 17-year locusts have appeared by the millions. The insects are in Susquehanna and Juniata valleys and are attacking the trees and plants with a voracity that bids fair to work much harm. Dr. Surface says that he does not expect them to spread to the western counties, although some may appear in those sections, but not in large numbers.

In case the locusts do appear the zoologist says that all trees should be gone over, and, wherever the locusts have made incisions to lay eggs, they should be closed, because the open wounds afford a chance for tree insects to make attacks.

The present locusts, says the doctor, come from the brood of 1894, when they were particularly annoying in this part of the state.

WOMEN HELPED

By Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy for Kidneys and Liver.

Disorders of women are the result of general bodily weakness. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is a strength builder and for women it has proved of great value. Thousands testify to this. A sick woman almost always has kidney trouble, which causes pain in the back, headache, nervousness and other distressing symptoms. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy helps the Kidneys and Liver to act properly, purifies the blood and gently moves the bowels, striking at the cause of Kidney, Liver, Blood and Bladder troubles. For over 35 years it has enjoyed steady and merited success, for it is an honest remedy and has stood the test of time. Write Dr. David Kennedy Co., Rondout, N. Y. for a free sample bottle and valuable medical booklet. Large bottle $1.00 at all druggists.

Charms of Motor-Boating.

Motor boating appeals to the adventure spirit which lies dormant in every man and woman with red blood in their veins. The joys of the sport are peculiar to itself. A road is more or less definite. It leads to a fixed destination and starts at a fixed point. Thus in walking, motoring or driving one usually knows the general outline of the new territory. There is more of uncertainty and mystery to a waterway. No matter how much time you may have at your disposal, it is difficult to exhaust the possibilities of even the smallest waterway. Every little river and inland lake boasts a thousand and one inviting nooks and quaint harbors.

Part of the fun of handling a motor boat is in piloting the craft. One does not need to be a full-fleged navigator to steer a small motor boat. Pleasure launches up to thirty feet do not draw more than two feet of water. Sharp reefs and sand bars are the only real dangers. The charm of many waterways lies along the shore line. Motor boats of twenty-five feet and under can usually run up within a few yards of the shores of the average inland lake or river. You soon grow to know the deep and shallow places by the color of the water. —Leslie's.

Attack New Divorce Laws.

The recent act of assembly providing an easy and convenient way of obtaining divorces without the publicity of jury trials is being attacked in the Blair county court as unconstitutional.

In the divorce suit brought by Frank Keith against Ada Keith the wife demanded a jury trial, claiming that the act of assemby was in violation of Section 6, Article 1, of the State Constitution which reads:

"Trial by jury shall be as heretofore, and the right thereof remains inviolate."

The court granted a rule. This is the first time the constitutionality of the new divorce law has been challenged.

Here and There.

The most delicious Soda Water can be had at Green's.

Mrs. David Dale entertained at her home, on High Street, on Saturday evening.

Mrs. Hugh N. Crider entertained at cards on Saturday afternoon of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank K. Lukenbach, of Tyrone, were Bellefonte visitors over Sunday.

New Perfection Oil Stoves & Ovens—at Potter-Hoy Hardware Co., Bellefonte, Pa.

The Edward Richards home, on East Linn Street, and the Thad Hamilton home, on East Howard Street, are being repainted.

Mrs. John I. Olewine and daughter, Adeline, who have been visiting in the South for several weeks, returned home on Sunday.

Miss Grace Marvin, head milliner at the Joseph & Co. 'store, was called to Binghamton, N. Y., on Friday of last week by the death of her mother.

Mr. and Mrs. William Sholl, whose home is in Jersey Ctty, N. J., were Bellefonte arrivals on Sunday and are visiting at the home of Mr. Sholl's parents.

W. R. Lentz, of Lewisburg, a brother-in-law of Harry Badger, of Bellefonte, was in town last week erecting a granite monument over the grave of Frances Twitmire.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Harper this week attended the commencement exercises of the University of Ohio, at Columbus, Ohio, where their son, Arthur, more popularly known here as "Bud," is an instructor.

Congressman Charles E. Patton was a Bellefonte visitor for a few hours on Friday of last week, stopping over for dinner with a party of friends with whom he was enjoying an automobile trip through this section.

Mrs. Emil Joseph and her two fine boys, Edmund and Emanuel, will spend a part of the summer at Scroon Lake, N. Y. Edmund will mix business with pleasure duriug his stay in the Adirondacks. He will tutor a class of ten or twelve boys from New York city.

Harrison Kline, one of that group of industrious and capable sons of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kline, departed on Friday of last week for Detroit, Michigan, where he has accepted a very nice position with the Goodrich Rubber Company. This company manufactures the famous Goodrich tires for automobiles. Since they wanted a good man they could not have made a better selection than Harrison Kline. We venture the prediction that he will more than "make good."

It was a pleasure to us to receive a call from Rev. J. A. Pratt, of Unionville, several days ago. Mr. Pratt is one of our valued readers and his mission here was to advance his subscription another year before departing for Norristown. Mr. Pratt recently accepted a call to the Jeffersonville Presbyterian church, at Norristown, and on Sunday, last, he preached his sermon, which was greatly enjoyed by all who heard him.

Mrs. Margaret Martz, of Altoona, is visiting her uncle, Thomas Wilson, of Pleasant View, who makes his home with Mr. and Mrs. Samuel McKinley. Mr. Wilson is very ill and his recovery is regarded as improbable, owing to his advanced years. Mr. Wilson is slightly over 88 years old. He is chaplain of the Milesburg Post, G. A. R., but owing to his illness was unable to meet with his old comrades on Memorial Day. Nevertheless, he was not forgotten by his friends, who decorated his room with flowers on that occasion.

The home-coming of little Paul Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Miller, of East High Street, was hastened somewhat by an outbreak of typhoid fever in the school for deaf and dumb children, near Philadelphia, which he has been attending for the last two years. Paul was not expected home before the latter part of next week, but his school was closed as soon as typhoid fever developed among the pupils, and he accordingly arrived home today. His father went to Coburn, where he met Paul and accompanied him to Bellefonte.

These may be the days of the high cost of living, but such a little thing as that apparently cuts no figure with Temp. Curse, a former Bellefonte boy, who was this week back from Pittsburg for a few days visit with old-time friends. Temp. is an inspector of mail carriers in the Pittsburg post office and holds one of the most responsible positions in the postal service in the Smoky City. When he first removed to Pittsburg he was rather slender in build, but nowadays he is well filled out and looks the picture of health. Persons who greeted him on the street were impressed with the strong resemblance between Temp. and his father, the late A. J. Cruse, who years ago was an honored resident and business man in Bellefonte.

Miss Lovan Henderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Henderson, of Howard, surprised her parents and friends last week when word was received that she had been married to Clyde Smith. The wedding took place at Scranton on Saturday, May 29. Miss Henderson left her home in Howard a few days previously, announcing that she intended visiting an aunt in Lock Haven. From there she went to Scranton and the ceremony was performed. The bride is one of Howard's most refined young ladies and for several years was chief operator in the Bald Eagle telephone exchange. Mr. Smith was formerly employed by the Commercial Union Telephone Company and has many friends in this section, having made his home in Bellefonte for some time.

Sidney Barlett, of Altoona, gave his old Bellefonte friends a treat last week by dropping into town and showing himself. His main purpose was to join Mrs. Barlett, who has been visiting here for some time past, and attend the wedding of his sister, Miss Mary B. Barlett and Howard W. Dry, the latter of Tyrone, on Thursday night. Sidney has been in Altoona for the last twelve years and during all that time has remained in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. He now is a brakeman on one of the fast freights between Altoona and Harrisburg and by hard and conscientious service has established a firm place for himself with the Pennsylvania. He likes railroading and judging by his appearance the work agrees with him.

All kinds of Disinfectants—at Green's Pharmacy Co.

Awnings and tents of all kinds at Miller's Hardware Store, Bellefonte, Pa.

The Misses Thomas on Monday evening entertained for Miss Daisy Potter and her bridal party.

George H. Smull, of Smullton, was a genial caller at "The Republican" office several days ago.

Squire Alfred Thompson, of Snow Shoe, was a business visitor to Bellefonte yesterday. His friends were glad to see him.

Mr. and Mrs. Blair Yarnell, of Snow Shoe, are visiting at the home of Mrs. Yarnell's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William McClellan.

John P. Harris has greatly improved the appearance of his home by the erection of a rough surface stone wall, along the Spring Street side.

Mrs. Margaret Snowden McClain, a daughter of Dr. Snowden, of Bristol, Tenn., is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Harris.

Housekeepers find New Perfection Oil Stoves & Ovens effect a saving in labor and fuel. For sale at Potter-Hoy Hardware Co., Bellefonte, Pa.

George H. Knisely, John McGinley, Charley Brachbill and several others comprised a party of fishermen that camped along Fishing Creek on Tuesday night.

Mrs. Maurice Runkle is visiting Bellefonte friends and will remain here until her husband is located and settled down in Reading, where he recently purchased a drug store.

Enameled kitchen ranges that never need blacking add to the pleasures of housekeeping. For sale at Miller's Hardware Store, Allegheny, Street, Bellefonte, Pa.

There will be a business meeting of the Bellefonte High School Alumni Association at the office of Fortney & Fortney, on Monday evening, next, at 7.30 o'clock. Officers will be elected.

A very welcome visitor to "The Republican" office a day or two ago was Charles E. Hartsock, of Stormstown, who called to advance his subscription to the paper. We are always glad to see Mr. Hartsock.

Many housekeepers received valuable ideas for cooking and baking at the demonstration lectures at Miller's Hardware Store, Allegheny Street, Bellefonte, Pa., showing the great advantages of the New Perfection Oil Stoves and Ovens.

So far as was possible, the debris piled about the Spring Creek bridge, near by the Bush House, was this week removed, an improvement greatly appreciated by business men and other residents of the lower part of Bellefonte

Montgomery & Co. have solved the problem of how to keep cool, regardless of how hot may be the weather. Drop into the Montgomery store and learn what they have to tell you about Sun Proofed Serges, for both men and boys.

Miss Pearl Royer spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Royer, at Tyrone. On her return to Bellefonte she was accompanied by her brother, Mac. Royer, who will visit for a time with his grandmother, Mrs. Harrison Kline.

Sun Proofed Serges are popular with men and boys who take pride in being well dressed. Montgomery & Co. take pride in selling their high grade of serges, knowing that each suit that goes out from the store means a new friend for that well known and firmly established store.

J. Will Mayes, the hustling proprietor of the Howard Marble & Granite Works, was a business visitor in Bellefonte on Monday and while in town honored "The Republican" office with a call. Will possesses about as much business energy as fully a half dozen ordinary men, which in itself explains his well merited success.

We are informed that the First National Nurseries, of Rochester, N. Y., desire a lady or gentleman representative in this section. They are well rated in the commercial reports and state that they have one thousand acres in growing stock. Any one out of employment would do well to write them at once and enclose a copy of this notice.

Frank Smith has qualified in the Clayt. Brown and Joe Thal class of trout fishermen. Tired of trailing along with the pikers who are content with trout measuring from 10 to 15 inches. Frank walked out to the falls, opposite John Noll's stream laundry on Monday evening and with an ordinary garden worm caught a trout that measured 22 inches and weighed three pounds and a half.

Street Commissioner Thomas Shaughnessy and a crew of men are at present engaged in cleaniug out underground gutters and drains at street crossings. One such gutter, at the intersection of Spring and Lamb Streets, was found to be so completely filled up that it had to be so be tunneled out by means of picks and shovels. From all indications the drain had been choked up for a long time.

Rev. Mr. Stoddard, who is widely known for the peculiar position he has taken on secret orders, will lecture in Hunter's Park on Monday and Tuesday evenings, June 12 and 13 on lodges as Christian institutions. Mr. Stoddard is a congregationalist preacher, from Washington, D. C., and according to Rev. Howard N. Hepler his lectures will be of interest to all who hear him. Men and women are invited.

During the time he has had charge of the Garman House J. McC. Davis has made numerous changes and improvements which have added greatly to the popularity of that well known hotel. His rigid care in requiring cleanliness about the place has on numerous occasions been warmly commended by the residents of that section of town. Recently Mr. Davis has made a number of improvements in the interior of the hotel which have been much admired by all who have seen them. The grill room has been completely overhauled and comfortable booths installed. The bar has been transformed into one of the most attractive in this part of the State. Adding to the appearance of the grill room and bar are a number of handsome paintings, on the walls, the work on which was done by the McSuley brothers.

The finest Talcum Powders—at Green's Pharmacy Co.

Miss Katherine Snyder, of Altoona, was the guest of Miss Katherine Kooney, several days last week.

David Gingery, of Martha, Democratic candidate for nomination for Sheriff, was greeting friends in town on Tuesday.

Altoona Elks will celebrate Flag Day, June 14, with an elaborate program, including services, a luncheon and a dance.

New Perfection Oil Stover & Ovens are ideal for cooking and baking. Sold by Potter-Hoy Hardware Co., Bellefonte, Pa.

Miss Rachel Shuey daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Shuey, has been quite ill for several days and, it is feared, is threatened with typhoid fever.

Miss Nellie Conley entertained on Tuesday afternoon from four until six, the occasion proving to be a most delightful one to a host of friends.

Harris Moore and Miss Grace McCoy, both of Philipsburg, were married several days ago at the home of the groom's brother, Andrew Moore, at Altoona.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Weaver, of Pittsburg, are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Montgomery. Henry is a former Bellefonte boy and his many friends here are glad to see him.

Ed. Eckenroth, the wall paper man, is the latest to join the ranks of the automobilists. He recently purchased the car owned by Lawyer W. Harrison Walker before the latter secured his new Ford.

H. C. Quigley and James C. Furst were in charge of the boy scouts, on Friday of last week, on a "hike" to the "House of Lords," where they remained over night and returned home the day following.

The Bellefonte Academy baseball club having closed the season on the home grounds will play the last game on the schedule on Saturday morning, meeting the strong Bloomsburg State Normal team, at Bloomsburg.

Here's a thank-you for Lewis Peters, of Milesburg, who on Tuesday very thoughtfully advanced his subscription to "The Republican" for another year. His nephew, Frank Peters, also of Milesburg, had charge of the transaction and did it up to the Queen's taste.

The annual convention of the Altoona District Epworth League will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, June 13 and 14 in the Fifth Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, Altoona. Rev. E. H. Yocum, D. D., of Bellefonte, and Rev. R. S. Oyler, of Milesburg, are on the program.

The Clearfield "Republican", speaking of the Memorial Day services held at Clearfield, pays this triubute to our fellow townsman, A. A. Dale: "The orator of the day was A. A. Dale, Esq., of Bellefonte. Mr. Dale's address was a masterly effort, evidenced careful preparation and was eloquently delivered."

Routine business was about all that was disposed of at the regular meeting of the Bellefonte Council on Monday evening, last. The most interesting subject up for discussion was the width of the proposed paving in Bishop Street, from Allegheny Street to the borough line. It was finally decided to refer the matter to the Street Committee.

Mrs. John M. Shugert will depart for Watsontown on Saturday, where she will be joined by Mrs. Jennie Brees Baker, of that place, and together they will go to Syracuse, N. Y., for the wedding on Wednesday evening of next week of Miss Katherine Burnett to Mr. I. P. Hazard. The wedding will take place at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Bruce Burlingame, who before her marriage was Miss Margaret Burnett.

Contractor R. B. Taylor has about completed the paving of Allegheny Street from Linn Street to Pike Alley, at Parrish's drug store. This section of the street is paved with crushed stone and asphaltum and in its finished condition present as most attractive appearance. This completes the street paving to Bishop Street and it is the intention of Contractor Taylor to rush that through as quickly as possible.

A pretty wedding was that on Thursday evening of last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Barlett, on Thomas Street. The contracting parties were their daughter, Miss Mary B. Barlett, and Howard W. Dry, the latter of Tyrone. The wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. C. W. Winey, pastor of the Bellefonte United Brethren church, and was witnessed by a number of friends of the happy young couple. Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Dry were serenaded, the calithumpians making things lively in that section of town.

It is a little out of the ordinary that a Pennsylvanian is summoned to Washington, D. C., to deliver a memorial address, but that was the experience of Rev. G. W. Emenhiser, who resided in Bellefonte eleven or twelve years ago and who now is located at Balsano, Cambria County. Mr. Emenhiser was invited to deliver the Memorial Day address for the Washington Association of the 45th Regiment, Penna. Vols. His address was full of interesting and instructive information and imparted some valuable points in regard to the history of that famous regiment. Of two thousand regiments, Mr. Emenhiser, pointed out, forty-five lost 200 or more men, the 45th Regiment standing eighteenth in this list. At South Mountain the regiment lost 134 men; at Cold Harbor 57 percent. of the 315 taken into battle were lost; at Bethseda church there were 181 casualties, and at Poplar Springs church, 204. There were 479 men who died during the war from sickness. Of 1960 enrolled all told there were 873 killed and wounded, including 98 who died in Confederate prisons and today less than 500 survive. In a general way, Mr. Emenhiser pointed out, one-fourth died in war, one-half since and one-fourth survive. Frank Hogan, who was Mr. Emenhiser's messmate, captured the flag of the Sixth Virginia Infantry at the storming of Fort Hill, April 2, 1865, in which assault Major Roland Cheesman lost a leg. On Memorial Day Mr. Emenhiser participated in a special service held over the grave of Major Cheesman. During the day he visited the grave of an older brother, Abram Emenhiser, who was in the same Company and who was mortally wounded at Cold Harbor, June 3, 1864, his death occurring just 47 years ago. On his return from Washington Mr. Emenhiser stopped over in Bellefonte and spent several very delightful hours with his old congregation in the Bellefonte United Brethren church.

STEVENS & FRY,
LAWYERS,
719 Story Street.

Boone, Iowa, Nov. 5, 1907.

Hon. Sidney A. Foster,
Sec. R. U. M. L. Ins. CO.,
Des Moines, Ia.

My Dear Sir:

I have your favor of November 2nd stating that my policy for $1,000 issued by your company is now full paid and I may take a full paid participating policy for the amount of my original policy, $1,000, and receive in cash the surplus, $428, or take guaranteed cash value, $575, and in addition cash surplus, $428, making a total cash value of $1,003, or I may take a full paid policy for $1650. I have paid in premium $735.-20, leaving me a profit of $267.80.

This is very satisfactory to me, and fully justifies the confidence which I had twenty years ago in the then new Iowa company organized by Iowa men, and it is a pleasure to know that the same men continue to manage its affairs. I hereby elect to take a full participating policy and my cash surplus, believing that the participating policy payable at my death is a good investment and absolutely safe.

Hoping for your continued success, I am,
Yours respectfully,

J.L.S.—A.M. JOHN L. STEVENS.
